GENERAL DESCRIPTION

HISTORY AND PURPOSE

Founded in 1891 by John D. Rockefeller, the University of Chicago is a private, coeducational institution located on the South Side of Chicago. Under the leadership of its first president, William Rainey Harper, the University introduced innovations that are now considered commonplace in American colleges and universities: the four-quarter system, extension courses and programs in the liberal arts for adults, the junior college concept, equal opportunities for women in education, and an emphasis on broad humanistic studies for undergraduates. Throughout its history, the University has sought to maintain an atmosphere of free, independent inquiry that is responsive to the needs of communities outside the University itself. Today, the University includes six graduate professional schools (Business, Divinity, Law, Medicine, Public Policy, and Social Service Administration), four graduate divisions (Biological Sciences, Humanities, Physical Sciences, and Social Sciences), the undergraduate College, and the Graham School of General Studies.

A distinguished Semiticist and a member of the Baptist clergy, William Rainey Harper believed that a great research university ought to have as one central occupation the scholarly study of religion, to prepare scholars for careers in teaching and research, and ministers for service to the church. These commitments led him to bring the Morgan Park Seminary of the Baptist Theological Union to Hyde Park, making the Divinity School the first professional school at the University of Chicago.

The Divinity School is located in Swift Hall, on the main quadrangle of the University’s campus and in close proximity to the Divisions of the Humanities and the Social Sciences. Cross-disciplinary work, a long-standing hallmark of the University, is strongly encouraged and in some respects institutionalized: many Divinity School faculty hold joint appointments with other departments in the University, students can and regularly do register for courses outside their specific academic location, and dissertation committees frequently feature coadvisers or readers from other parts of the University.

From its inception, the Divinity School has pursued Harper’s vision of an institution devoted to systematic research and inquiry into the manifold dimensions of religion, seeking to serve both those preparing for careers in teaching and research and those preparing for careers in ministry. The School has served for decades as the largest single institutional educator of faculty members for theological seminaries, departments of theology, and programs in religious studies across the spectrum of educational institutions that comprise American higher education. At the same time, the School is privileged to number among its alumni a long and distinguished list of ministers, and continues this tradition today through a Master of Divinity (M.Div.) curriculum that prepares ministers for a life of service to the public church.
OVERVIEW OF CURRICULUM

The Divinity School offers programs of study leading to the degrees of Master of Arts in Divinity (A.M.), Master of Arts in Religious Studies (A.M.R.S.), Doctor of Philosophy (Ph.D.), and Master of Divinity (M.Div.).

The A.M. in Divinity (A.M.) program is the foundational program for students without a graduate degree who wish to pursue the Ph.D. in the Divinity School.

The A.M. in Religious Studies (A.M.R.S.) program serves students who seek a general introduction to the study of religion. It does not lead to Ph.D. work in the Divinity School.

The Ph.D. program prepares students for scholarship, teaching, and research in the study of religion.

The M.Div. program is designed to prepare students for traditional, well-defined ministerial professions as well as new and emerging forms of ministry.

The Divinity School also offers dual degree programs with the University’s Irving B. Harris School of Public Policy Studies, Law School, and School of Social Service Administration.

The requirements for each degree offered by the Divinity School are explained in the following section, “Degree Programs and Requirements,” on page 10.

Students in the A.M.R.S. and M.Div. programs are required to register for and to complete a certain number of courses in order to receive the degree. Students in the A.M. and Ph.D. programs are required to register according to a two-stage residence structure. These A.M. and Ph.D. students are not required to register for a certain number of courses, except for three courses required of A.M. students (DVSC 30100, 30200, and 30300) and insofar as particular areas of study specify certain courses for their Ph.D. students. Students should consult the area guidelines (available in the Dean of Students Office) for their respective areas of study concerning these matters. In addition to attending to any area requirements, students are also advised to maintain a substantial course load during their A.M. years and their first year of doctoral study, in order both to develop their own scholarly capacities and to afford faculty members appropriate opportunities for the assessment of their work.

The Divinity School is organized into three committees and ten areas of study that support the School’s degree programs: Constructive Studies in Religion (Religious Ethics, Philosophy of Religion, Theology), Historical Studies in Religion (Biblical Studies, History of Christianity, History of Judaism), Religion and the Human Sciences (History of Religions, Anthropology and Sociology of Religion, Religion and Literature), and Islamic Studies. In addition to responsibility for the administration of the curriculum of these areas, the faculty annually offers a small number of courses designed to serve specific program requirements, e.g., the sequence “The Study of Religion” for the A.M. program, the sequences “The Public Church” and “Arts of Ministry” for the M.Div. program, and reading courses for Ph.D. examination preparation and dissertation research. According to personal interests and academic specializations, faculty members of the School may teach in one or more of these areas. The faculty members teaching at present in each committee are listed in the section “Committees of the Faculty and Areas of Study,” on page 28.
The academic year at the University of Chicago is divided into four quarters of approximately three months each, but the Divinity School offers formal courses only in the autumn, winter, and spring quarters. Students normally matriculate in the autumn quarter. Because the Divinity School is one of the academic units of the University of Chicago, its students have available to them, in addition to courses offered in the Divinity School, a wide range of courses in other divisions and schools. The Divinity School encourages all students to make use of these offerings in view of their specific research interests.

In addition to accommodating students in its degree programs, the Divinity School can make arrangements to accommodate senior research fellows and non-degree students. Scholars holding the Ph.D. degree may apply to be in residence as senior fellows in the Martin Marty Center. For more information, contact the Director of the Martin Marty Center (see pages 69–70). A student pursuing a doctoral degree at a foreign university may apply to be in residence as a non-degree student if that student is sponsored by a Divinity School faculty member. For more information, contact the Dean of Students.

Further information regarding the Divinity School is available online at http://divinity.uchicago.edu.

Please note: One of the accrediting bodies for the Divinity School is the American Theological Association (ATS). Students who are concerned that the Divinity School may not be in accord with the guidelines established by the ATS are invited to contact the association at http://www.ats.edu.

DEGREE PROGRAMS and REQUIREMENTS

GENERAL REQUIREMENTS

The following general requirements apply to all students in the Divinity School.

A degree from the Divinity School is awarded following the completion of all stipulated requirements for the degree. These always include a minimum number of years in residence, certification of foreign language competence, and the completion of all formal exercises specific to the degree.

Requirements for course work vary among degree programs at the Divinity School. Students in the A.M.R.S. and M.Div. programs are required to register for and complete a certain number of courses as follows: nine courses for the A.M.R.S. program; twenty-seven courses for the M.Div. program.

Students in the A.M. and Ph.D. programs are not required to register for a set number of courses. Students in the A.M. and A.M.R.S. programs are required to complete in the first year of the program the three-course sequence “The Study of Religion” (DVSC 30100, “Introduction to Religion and the Human Sciences”; DVSC 30200, “Introduction to Historical Studies”; and DVSC 30300, “Introduction to Constructive Studies”). Particular areas of study do require specific courses of their doctoral students, and students should consult relevant faculty members and the guidelines of their respective areas of study concerning these matters. Students normally should maintain a substantial course load during the A.M. years and the first year of doctoral study, both to develop their own scholarly capacities and to provide appropriate opportunities for faculty members to assess their work.

Students in a degree program normally complete the residence requirement through continuous registration in the autumn, winter, and spring quarters of successive academic years. All students doing research leading to a degree, preparing for the qualifying examination, or writing dissertations must be registered.

M.A. and M.Div. students will not be permitted to register for the second or third year of their programs if they have more than three incomplete grades outstanding. (An incomplete grade is marked as an “I” on a student’s transcript. See “Grading System,” page 52, for more information.)

Students complete the modern foreign language requirement in the various degree programs of the Divinity School by passing the University of Chicago language examinations with a “High Pass” (P+). Administered by the University, the examinations test reading comprehension by requiring the translation into idiomatic English of short passages from scholarly publications.

Students register to graduate upon completion of all degree requirements.
MASTER OF ARTS PROGRAMS

DEGREES OFFERED

The Divinity School offers three master’s degrees: the A.M.R.S., the A.M., and the M.Div. The A.M.R.S. requires one year of residence and is designed for students with vocational plans not involving doctoral work in religious studies. The A.M. requires two years of residence and is primarily designed for students preparing for admission to doctoral programs in religious studies. The M.Div. requires three years of residence and is designed for those interested in careers in Christian ministry, including careers in teaching and scholarship. See detailed descriptions of the requirements for these degrees below.

TRANSFER AMONG PROGRAMS

Students are admitted to only one of the master’s-level degree programs, but the Divinity School recognizes that students may change their educational objectives during their first year of study. For that reason, if students have persuasive reasons for doing so, they may petition to transfer among the programs.

Students in both the A.M.R.S. and the A.M. programs are required to take the three courses introducing students to the three faculty committees. In the spring quarter of their first year, all students will meet with the Dean of Students to review their academic progress and goals. Students desiring to transfer among programs may petition to do so.

In the winter quarter of the second year (or in the winter quarter of the year following receipt of the A.M. degree) for those enrolled in the A.M. program and of the third year for those enrolled in the M.Div. program, students may apply to the Ph.D. program by in-house petition. A.M. students who wish to do so must have demonstrated competence in French or German and have completed three courses in the area of study to which they are applying by the end of the autumn quarter.

MASTER OF ARTS IN DIVINITY (A.M.)

The A.M. program in Divinity introduces students to the basic substance and methods of academic religious inquiry. It is designed for those who wish to pursue the doctorate in religion but have not completed a master’s degree program in the study of religion or a relevant related field of study.

The A.M. program is two years in duration. Students in the program may apply by course of study petition for Ph.D. admission in the winter quarter of their second year or in the winter quarter of the year following receipt of the A.M. The program does not require a set number of courses for its completion. Students usually register for three courses in each of the six quarters of residence, and this number is optimal for achieving the program’s dual goal of genuine breadth of acquaintance with the methods of religious inquiry and some depth of knowledge in a specific area of concentration.

Requirements

1. Two years of Scholastic Residence.
2. Proof of competence in French or German.
3. Two years of course work, including at least the following:
Satisfactory completion during the first year of study of the three courses that comprise the sequence “The Study of Religion” (see description below).

Satisfactory completion of one additional course from each of the three committees of the faculty. Courses elected may be at whatever level is appropriate to the student’s background and ability.

Unless otherwise indicated, satisfactory completion signifies work completed at the level of B- or higher.

The Study of Religion Course Sequence

The academic study of religion(s) is complex not simply by virtue of its diverse subject matter, but because of the many different perspectives from which scholars investigate and define the subject. Scholars of religion throughout the academy engage in research that emphasizes historical, comparative, literary critical, philosophical, social scientific, or ethical methods and questions. The Divinity School faculty believes that the capacity to engage in this interdisciplinary conversation will enrich the student’s scholarly agenda. For that reason, the A.M. program requires enrollment during the first year of the program in the three-course sequence listed below. These courses accomplish three purposes. First, they illustrate the types of questions that are pursued within the three committees of the faculty: the Committee on Religion and the Human Sciences, the Committee on Historical Studies in Religion, and the Committee on Constructive Studies in Religion. Second, they situate these methods and questions in the wider sweep of Western inquiries into the nature of religion. Third, they assist the A.M. student in defining the distinctive character of his or her Ph.D. project, and the group of written examinations that would best enable the student to pursue that project.

Requirements for each course will be determined by the instructors. These courses may not be taken pass/fail. Successful completion requires receipt of a letter grade of B- or higher. The following sequence is specific to the 2007–2008 academic year:

- DVSC 30100 Introduction to Religion and the Human Sciences. Wedemeyer
- DVSC 30200 Introduction to Historical Studies in Religion. Mendes-Flohr
- DVSC 30300 Introduction to Constructive Studies in Religion. Arnold

Elective Course Work

With the exception of the three-course sequence “The Study of Religion,” A.M. students elect their course work for the degree (usually a total of fifteen courses over the two years of the program). They consult with faculty about the courses that would be most useful in helping them to determine the focus and direction of their work. The following guidelines outline the types of work these students should pursue over the two years of the program:

1. Further courses emphasizing breadth in the study of religion—A.M. students must complete three additional courses beyond the sequence “The Study of Religion,” one from each of the three committees of the faculty.
2. Courses in the area of study in which the student wishes to concentrate Ph.D. study—the A.M. student who applies to the Ph.D. program must have completed three courses in the proposed area of concentration.

3. Language study, further elective course work in the Divinity School, or course work elsewhere in the University.

Application to the Ph.D. Program

The Divinity School's A.M. program is its primary source of Ph.D. students. While admission to the A.M. does not guarantee admission to the Ph.D., the Divinity School does offer its A.M. students the opportunity to apply to the Ph.D. program by in-house petition, and a student's performance in the A.M. program constitutes the central criterion for admission to the Ph.D. program.

A.M. students apply to the Ph.D. program in the winter quarter of the second year or the winter quarter following receipt of the A.M. (The A.M. residence requirement makes it impossible for the student to complete all A.M. degree requirements before applying to the Ph.D. program; Ph.D. admission is contingent upon successful completion of all A.M. requirements prior to registration as a Ph.D. student.)

To apply to the Ph.D. program, an A.M. student must accomplish the following:

1. Satisfactory completion of three courses, with grades recorded on the transcript, in the area in which the student proposes to concentrate Ph.D. study. These must be completed by the conclusion of the autumn quarter of the year prior to that in which the student makes application to the Ph.D. program.

2. Demonstration of competence in French or German. (This requirement must be completed by the conclusion of the autumn quarter of the year prior to that in which the student makes application to the Ph.D. program.)

3. Submission of an appropriate research paper written for a course offered by the area to which the student is applying. It must be submitted with the grade and original faculty comments.

4. Submission of a course of study petition requesting a faculty adviser, proposing written examinations—listing at least four Divinity School faculty members—and outlining a program of study at the Ph.D. level.

Master of Arts in Religious Studies (A.M.R.S.)

The A.M. program in Religious Studies is designed for students who wish to pursue graduate study in religion but do not intend to pursue the Ph.D. degree in religion. The A.M.R.S. program can be completed in one year.

Requirements

1. Registration for, and completion of, a minimum of nine courses during one year of Scholastic Residence.

2. Satisfactory completion of the three courses that comprise the sequence “The Study of Religion” (see description on page 12).

3. Demonstration of competence in French or German.
4. Satisfactory completion (B- or above) of courses in at least three areas of study in at least two of the committees of the faculty. Students should consult with the Dean of Students concerning an appropriate range of course work that meets this requirement.

5. Completion of a one-hour oral examination based on a paper that represents the student’s interests in the study of religion. This document is normally the revised version of a paper the student wrote to complete the requirements of a course. The oral examination is convened by the Dean of Students, and includes the student and three faculty members with whom the student has worked. The examination paper is chosen by the student, but the student’s choice must be approved well in advance by the faculty member under whose direction the paper was originally written. A student scheduling his or her examination should make application to do so no later than the third week of the quarter in which he or she intends to take it.

In consultation with the faculty adviser and the Dean of Students, A.M.R.S. students are free to choose from the course offerings of the various areas of study in the Divinity School and other parts of the University to meet these requirements. In some cases, the consent of the instructor may be required.

DOCTOR OF PHILOSOPHY (PH.D.) PROGRAM

The Doctor of Philosophy (Ph.D.) program prepares students for teaching and research in the area of religion. Instruction and research in the Ph.D. program is organized by means of the ten areas of study: Anthropology and Sociology of Religion, Biblical Studies, History of Christianity, History of Judaism, History of Religions, Islamic Studies, Philosophy of Religion, Religion and Literature, Religious Ethics, and Theology. Ph.D. students concentrate their work in an area of study toward the end of achieving a high level of expertise and the capacity to pursue advanced research in it. Ph.D. students also must pursue substantial work in at least one other area of study to prepare broadly for their future careers and to locate their research in contexts outside of, but relevant to, their own concentration.

The Divinity School’s Committee on Degrees—composed of the Dean, the Dean of Students, and the chair of each committee of the faculty—supervises the individual doctoral student’s course of study and dissertation proposal. (Students who enter the Ph.D. program from the A.M. in Divinity program must complete all requirements for the Ph.D. not completed as part of their A.M. curriculum.)

Requirements

1. Four years of Scholastic Residence. One year of Scholastic Residence is normally waived at the time of admission for students who enter with the master’s degree from an institution other than the University of Chicago.

2. Satisfactory completion (at least B- level) during the first year of three courses, one from each committee of the faculty. Courses in the A.M. sequence “The Study of Religion” may fulfill this requirement.

3. Ph.D. students must certify reading competence in two languages for scholarly research. Under normal circumstances, these languages will be
French and German. Ph.D. students may, however, file a minor petition with the Committee on Degrees to propose the replacement of either French or German with certification in a different language for scholarly research as the second language of the two. The petition should state briefly but fully the reasons for this request, and must be endorsed by the student’s advisor. It should also indicate whether the University offers a reading examination in the language or, in cases when such an examination is unavailable, explain how the student will certify reading competence. Students filing such a petition normally do so by the end of the second year of doctoral study.

4. Approval from the Committee on Degrees of a course of study petition outlining the student’s anticipated program of study through the qualifying examination. (For students in the Divinity School’s A.M. in Divinity program, this petition constitutes part of the application for doctoral admission.) Entering Ph.D. students should submit this petition during their first year in residence and must submit it by the end of the fourth quarter of residence. (For further details, see the section “The Course of Study Petition,” on the next page.)

5. Satisfactory completion of courses, colloquia, and assignments that may be stipulated in the specific guidelines of the student’s area of concentration.

6. Satisfactory completion of the qualifying examination, which consists of (a) the four written examinations specified in the student’s petition and approved by the Committee on Degrees, (b) a research paper written by the student and submitted to all examiners during the first week of the quarter in which the student takes the qualifying examination, and (c) a concluding oral examination focused on the research paper and the written examinations. The oral examination committee must include at least four Divinity School faculty members. Students in the Ph.D. program should take the qualifying examination within three calendar years of approval of the course of study petition. (For further details, see the section “The Qualifying Examination,” below.)

7. The completion of an acceptable dissertation approved by the student’s established reading committee. The dissertation shall be an original contribution to scholarship in the area of religious inquiry. The student should submit the dissertation proposal to the Committee on Degrees within one calendar year of the completion of the qualifying examination. The dissertation should be completed within five calendar years of approval of the proposal. (For further details, see the section “Procedures for Writing the Dissertation,” on page 19.)

The Course of Study Petition

The course of study petition includes the following:

1. A statement that identifies topics of scholarly interest and a proposal for research.

2. A list of four written examinations drawn from among those offered by the areas of study as best suited to the student’s program. (At least four Divinity School faculty members must participate in the written examinations.)

3. The designation of one faculty member as adviser for the student’s course of study.

The student submits the original petition and five copies to the Dean of Students Office by the Friday of the sixth week of the appropriate quarter. The petition is first reviewed by faculty working in the student’s area of concentration, who then refer the petition to the Committee with their recommendation for action.
The Qualifying Examination

Ph.D. students normally take the qualifying examination within three calendar years of approval from the Committee on Degrees of the course of study petition. (The precise timing is determined by the student in consultation with the adviser and other faculty examiners.) The process of study leading up to the examination provides an opportunity for systematic consideration of the student's field of professional competence in religious studies, as well as in at least one other related field. The examination itself is intended to demonstrate the student's general knowledge of the scholarship in these professional fields of competence and also the student's readiness to pursue a dissertation. The qualifying examination contains both written and oral components.

The written examinations test the student's ability to organize, synthesize, and analyze a substantial body of knowledge and reading in response to questions set by the faculty. The student completes four written examinations selected from those offered by the areas of study in the Divinity School. The student will usually complete three examinations in his or her area of concentration and one from another area. Some areas may encourage students to complete two examinations in the area of concentration and two from other areas. Students should consult the respective Area Guidelines, available in the Dean of Students Office, for further details about examinations and oral statement papers.

Each written examination is four hours in length, and students pick up the questions at the Divinity School and return them there. (Time will be allowed before and after each exam for pick-up and return. In exceptional cases, space will be provided to write exams in Swift Hall.) The Divinity School faculty regards the optimal length of a student's answer to any one set of examination questions to be a total of 3,000 to 4,500 words, or ten to fifteen typed, double-spaced pages. Students have the options of writing their answers by hand, or with the use of a typewriter or a word processor.

Based on consultation between the student and the student’s adviser, the research paper will ordinarily have as its topic a subject in the student’s intended area of dissertation research, and should indicate the student’s capacity for writing a dissertation. The paper should be twenty-five to forty pages, typed and double-spaced, and should be submitted to all examiners early in (ideally during the first week of) the quarter in which the student plans to take the qualifying examination.

The oral examination tests the student's ability to engage in discussion of issues relevant to his or her fields of competence. The written examinations, the published bibliographies for the exams the student is taking, and the research paper form the basis of the oral examination.

The student's adviser for the course of study convenes the oral examination and is specifically responsible for communicating its result to the student at the conclusion of the examination. The Dean of Students writes to each examinee following the oral examination week to communicate formally the result of his or her qualifying examination.
A student who has not completed the qualifying examination within three years of the approval of the course of study must consult with the dean and the dean of students to establish a satisfactory deadline for its completion.

Although bibliographies for individual exams may change from time to time, a student is entitled to take the qualifying examination based on the bibliography in effect when his or her course of study petition is approved by the Committee on Degrees, so long as the student takes the examination within five years of that date. A student who has not taken the qualifying examination within that five-year period will ordinarily use the bibliographies in effect at the time the examination is taken. A student who has not completed the qualifying examination and has been out of residence for a total of five years or more must take the examination in effect at the time of resumption of residency.

To achieve a passing grade on the qualifying examination, a student must normally accomplish the following:

1. Score B or higher on all written examinations.
2. Complete the oral examination at a satisfactory level, as determined by the examining committee (this includes production of a satisfactory research document).

In cases where most or all of the written examinations are at the B level, a strong oral examination is necessary in order for the student to pass the qualifying examination. Grades on qualifying examinations are not subject to appeal, and failed qualifying examinations may not be retaken.

Procedures for Writing the Dissertation

Upon completion of the qualifying examination, the student proceeds to the dissertation. Three formal steps organize this process: the dissertation proposal colloquium and subsequent submission of the proposal to the Committee on Degrees, the oral review of dissertation research, and the oral defense of the completed dissertation.

1. The dissertation proposal colloquium, which takes place following completion of the qualifying examination, is a meeting of the student and the dissertation reading committee (normally three members of the faculty—an adviser from the Divinity School faculty and two readers) to review the dissertation proposal. It should be noted that the dissertation adviser may be someone other than the student’s program adviser hitherto. Further details on the dissertation proposal can be found in the “Guidelines of the Committee on Degrees,” available in the Dean of Students Office.

When the members of the dissertation reading committee approve the proposal, the student submits the proposal in the form of a formal petition to the Committee on Degrees. Approval of this petition establishes the student as a Ph.D. candidate.

A student who has not submitted a dissertation proposal to the Committee on Degrees within one calendar year of completing the qualifying examination must consult with the Dean and Dean of Students to establish a satisfactory deadline for submission of the proposal.
2. The oral review of dissertation research occurs at a time determined by the student in consultation with the adviser. It provides an opportunity for the student and the reading committee to discuss the work in progress, both to review what has been written and to discuss what needs to be done to complete the dissertation.

The student provides a written document, which is the basis of the review. This is normally either a representative portion of what the student has written, or a separate document that summarizes research. The exact character of the document will be determined in consultation with the adviser. The approved dissertation committee conducts the oral review, but additional faculty may be invited.

3. The oral defense of the dissertation is a requirement that may be and usually is waived upon the recommendation of the dissertation committee and the approval of the Dean.

The completed dissertation should be submitted to the adviser and reading committee far enough in advance to ensure the final approval within the first month of the quarter in which the student expects to receive the degree. Two identical copies of the completed dissertation and the completed UMI microfilming information must be submitted to the Dean of Students in the Divinity School at least four weeks before convocation. Although there is no maximum page limit, the Divinity School faculty considers an optimum dissertation length to be no more than 250 to 300 pages.

The student must complete the dissertation within five calendar years after establishing Ph.D. candidacy, unless further extension is approved by the Committee on Degrees in consultation with the dissertation adviser. Extension of this five-year period will be granted only in extraordinary circumstances.

Guidelines for Progress in Ph.D. Studies

The Divinity School faculty has established a set of guidelines for normal progress through the Ph.D. program, as follows:

1. Approval of the course of study petition by the fourth quarter of full-time residence.
2. Demonstration of competence in French and German by the end of the second year of full-time residence.
3. Completion of the qualifying examination within three calendar years of approval of the course of study petition.
4. Approval of the dissertation proposal within one calendar year of completion of the qualifying examination.
5. Completion of the dissertation within five calendar years of approval of the dissertation proposal.

Students should plan their program of study in accordance with these guidelines, consulting as appropriate their faculty adviser and the Dean of Students. A student who anticipates difficulty in meeting one of the guidelines should discuss this with the faculty adviser and the Dean of Students.

The deans, in consultation with faculty in the appropriate area of study, may on rare occasions advise a student to discontinue doctoral studies. Such discussions may occur between approval of the course of study petition and the qualifying examination, or between completion of the qualifying examination and approval of the dissertation proposal.
A student's Ph.D. studies may be terminated formally by failure to produce a satisfactory course of study petition that is approved by the Committee on Degrees; failure of the qualifying examination; failure to prepare a satisfactory dissertation proposal in an appropriate period of time (usually within a year of completion of the qualifying examination); or failure to write a dissertation, within five years of establishing Ph.D. candidacy, that is deemed satisfactory by the dissertation committee.

MINISTRY PROGRAMS

The Master of Divinity (M.Div.) program is a course of professional study preparing students for Christian ministry. Ph.D. students with an interest in ministry may apply for admission to the special yearlong program “Certification in Ministerial Studies for Ph.D. Students.” Dual-degree programs have been developed in cooperation with the University’s Irving B. Harris School of Public Policy Studies, Law School, and School of Social Service Administration that enable students to prepare for careers in ministry and either public policy, law, or social work. These ministry programs are described in the following pages.

Ministry students at the Divinity School access the rich resources for training and experience provided not only within the University but also by the neighboring theological schools and the metropolitan area of Chicago. Besides the courses that are designed specifically for ministerial studies, students draw from the curricular offerings of all of the areas of the Divinity School as well as from the graduate divisions and other professional schools of the University.

Within walking distance of the Divinity School are major theological institutions of the Lutheran, Roman Catholic, Presbyterian, United Church of Christ, Unitarian Universalist, and Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) communions. Methodist and Episcopal seminaries receive our students on Chicago’s North Side. As noted, M.Div. students may take courses in these institutions that fulfill ordination requirements and expectations of their respective denominations.

The city and its environs are home to a wealth of churches and other religious institutions, professional training centers (hospitals offering Clinical Pastoral Education [CPE] and chaplaincy training programs, counseling centers, etc.), social service organizations, and political action groups. The Divinity School’s programs of study are flexible enough to allow inclusion in a student’s career of many types of experience and training that can be gained in these various centers of life and work. A limited number of grants enabling M.Div. students to study ministry in other global contexts is also available.

The Master of Divinity and Certification in Ministerial Studies programs are planned and supervised by the Committee on Ministry Studies of the Divinity School. The Director of Ministry Studies acts as general adviser to all students in ministry programs and assists them in establishing an advisory relationship with particular faculty members with whom the specialized components of the student’s program are designed. The Director also advises all students in the ministry program on field placement and denominational requirements.

A brochure describing the M.Div. program, which includes a quarter-by-quarter exemplary curriculum, is available from the Dean of Students Office. Information is also available on the Divinity School’s Web site at http://divinity.uchicago.edu/.
MASTER OF DIVINITY (M.DIV.)

The M.Div. program provides a sequence of studies that requires the student to (1) establish a breadth of competence in religious studies; (2) develop a thorough understanding of biblical, historical, and theological foundations for Christian ministry; and (3) integrate theories of ministry and ecclesiological understandings with practice. Focusing on the vocation of ministry, the program seeks to prepare ministers who will continue to learn and grow in the knowledge and skills required for the arts of ministry.

The field education component of the program offers students opportunities for church-related work. Second-year students spend one year of supervised field education in a selected teaching congregation in the Chicago area, chosen to provide broad exposure to the various responsibilities of the parish minister. An additional fieldwork component offers the opportunity for students to experience another year of fieldwork, a unit of CPE, or other special training in some facet of ministry.

Three exercises in practical theological reflection, one in each year of the M.Div. program, provide a common structure for the work of all students in the program. These are the first-year Public Church sequence, the second-year Arts of Ministry sequence, and the third-year Senior Ministry Project.

The Public Church sequence, taken by all first-year students, consists of a historical introduction to the cultural context of ministry in contemporary America, and engagement in a model of practical religious reasoning. The sequence encourages students to think about their theological education as one oriented toward a threefold public in the church, the academy, and the wider society.

The Arts of Ministry sequence in Worship, Preaching, and Pastoral Care offers course work in practical theology. On the one hand, it relates these perennial features of Christian ministry to the Divinity School’s theological and cultural exploration of religious leadership and ritual. On the other hand, it relates this reflective awareness of religious practices to the concrete experiences of the second-year field education setting.

The Senior Ministry Project consists of a thesis and public presentation that draw together the student’s work in historical, systematic, and practical theology to arrive at an appropriate and intellectually plausible judgment about some aspect of religious thought or practice. The specific balance among historical, systematic, and practical theological resources will vary according to the student’s interests and the faculty adviser with whom he or she works.

M.Div. students extend their work in historical theology by taking at least three courses in Bible (Introduction to Hebrew Bible, Introduction to New Testament, and a course in biblical theology or exegesis), and at least two courses from the regular offerings of the History of Christianity and Theology areas (History of Christian Thought I–VI, History of Theological Ethics I–II, and/or The History of Christianity, 1600–1900).

M.Div. students are also expected in their second or third year to extend their work in systematic theology by selecting a course that provides an opportunity for constructive theological reflection: addressing a central question in Christian theology, reckoning with the position of a major thinker, and coming to a critical judgment of the question.
Requirements

1. Three years of scholastic residence.
2. Completion of a minimum of twenty-eight courses, including the following:
   a) The Public Church and Its Ministry (CHRM 30200, 30300).
   b) Introduction to Hebrew Bible (BIBL 32400).
   c) Introduction to New Testament (BIBL 32500).
   d) Any two of the following courses in the History of Christianity or Theology: HCHR 30100, 30200, 30300, 30400, 30700, 31000; THEO 31100, 31200.
   e) Arts of Ministry for the Public Church (CHRM 35500, 35600, 35700).
   f) One course in biblical theology or exegesis.
   g) One course in History of Religions, Religion and Literature, or Anthropology and Sociology of Religion taught by a Divinity School faculty member in the Committee on Religion and the Human Sciences.
   h) One course in Constructive Theology, selected from a set established annually by the Committee on Ministry Studies in consultation with faculty in Theology, to be taken before completion of the Senior Ministry Project seminar.
   i) The Senior Ministry Project seminar (CHRM 42500).
3. Participation in the weekly one-credit integration seminar for first-year students, “Introduction to Ministry Studies (Colloquium).”
4. Demonstration of competence in either New Testament Greek or Biblical Hebrew by either course work or examination.
5. Successful completion of field education and fieldwork. A year of field education in the Teaching Parish program is required during the student’s second year, including successful completion of the weekly practicum class, “Reflection on the Practice of Ministry (Practicum).” A subsequent unit of approved and supervised fieldwork is also required.
6. Completion in the third year of an acceptable M.Div. project, consisting of two parts: (a) a thirty-page thesis in practical theology for the public church; and (b) the oral presentation of the project in an appropriate public forum that includes ministry students and members of the Committee on Ministry Studies.
   M.Div. students may take up to four courses in the neighboring theological schools, ordinarily for purposes of meeting ordination requirements. Each course must be approved in advance by the Director of Ministry Studies and the Dean of Students in the Divinity School. In special circumstances, with the approval of the Director and the Committee on Ministry Studies, students may take up to two additional courses in these schools.
   All M.Div. students are expected to maintain a grade average of at least B-. A student whose grade average falls below B- may be placed on academic probation or asked by the Committee on Ministry Studies to terminate his or her program of study.
Financial Aid

The Divinity School recognizes that most candidates for ministry cannot anticipate a career that includes substantial financial remuneration, and makes every effort to relieve a significant part of the financial burden involved in preparation for ministry. M.Div. students qualify for various forms of Divinity School financial assistance. These include:

1. Entering Fellowships in Ministry Studies.
2. Tuition scholarships that pay from half to full tuition. These awards are based on academic merit and financial need; they are also renewable.
3. Field education stipends of $2,000 per quarter to all second-year M.Div. students participating in the Arts of Ministry sequence while serving a local congregation.
4. Fieldwork stipends of $1,500 to support the completion of the fieldwork placement. When such placement requires a registration fee (e.g., for Clinical Pastoral Education), the Divinity School subsidizes such a charge up to $500.

Selected Courses

- CHRM 30200 The Public Church I. Gilpin
- CHRM 30300 The Public Church II. Culp

- CHRM 42500 Senior Thesis Seminar. Gamwell

Certification in Ministerial Studies for Ph.D. Students

The program of Certification in Ministerial Studies is intended for students whose ultimate educational and professional goals require scholarly attainment in one of the fields of religious studies, and who desire as well the professional educational qualifications for religious leadership. A sequence that is pursued during one full year of a student's Ph.D. program, the certification program includes requirements in field education, arts of ministry, and major papers in theology, ecclesiology, and a problem in ministry. To enter the program, a student must have the consent of his or her academic adviser and the Director of Ministry Studies, and submit a petition to the Committee on Degrees in the winter quarter prior to the desired certification year. Before receiving the certification, the student must complete all requirements for the Ph.D. degree, including the dissertation. In general, the certification program will add one full year to the normal student career. The requirements for the Certification in Ministerial Studies are as follows:

1. Completion of nine approved courses. The student is required to take the three-quarter sequence in the Arts of Ministry for the Public Church (CHRM 35500, 35600, 35700) in the autumn, winter, and spring quarters.
2. Completion of three quarters of church-based education and the Field Education Practicum.

3. Submission of three papers on ministry to an examining committee. One paper must be an exposition of foundational theological resources on which the student draws in conceptualizing and performing ministry. A second paper must develop a normative understanding of religious community in relation to the foundational position. A third paper must explore a problematic context within which the religious community exists and its ministries are performed. This paper may focus upon the personal, societal, or cultural dimensions of a problem. The student should select courses other than those in the Arts of Ministry in the Public Church sequence to assist in the preparation of the three papers on ministry.

4. Successful completion of an oral examination based on the three papers on ministry. The oral examination will be conducted by a committee of at least four faculty members, including a chairperson. The examining committee may recommend additional requirements to be fulfilled by the student before awarding the Certification in Ministerial Studies.

5. The Certification in Ministerial Studies is conferred upon successful completion of the above program and the successful completion of all requirements for the Ph.D. degree, including the dissertation. In no case will the Certification in Ministerial Studies be given to a student who fails to complete all requirements of the Ph.D. program.

DUAL DEGREE PROGRAMS

The Divinity School offers dual degree programs with the University’s Irving B. Harris School of Public Policy Studies, Law School, and School of Social Service Administration. Applicants must gain acceptance to both schools to enroll in a dual degree program. Under normal circumstances, the prospective student will apply to both schools prior to matriculation and indicate on each application his or her intent to pursue the dual degree. First-year students may, however, apply during that year to the relevant program and enter the dual degree program upon that school’s acceptance of the application.

Students in a dual degree program who are eligible may receive Divinity School financial assistance for the years they register in the Divinity School. Students are advised to consult with the cooperating school concerning its financial aid practices for their time of registration there.

DUAL M.DIV./A.M. WITH THE IRVING B. HARRIS SCHOOL OF PUBLIC POLICY STUDIES

The Divinity School and the University’s Irving B. Harris School of Public Policy Studies offer a dual degree program for students whose professional plans require training in both ministry and public policy. For more information, contact: The Dean of Students, The Irving B. Harris School of Public Policy Studies, 1155 East 60th Street, Chicago, Illinois 60637 (phone: 773-834-2576; fax: 773-702-0926; e-mail: cohen@uchicago.edu; Web site: http://harrisschool.uchicago.edu/).
DUAL A.M.R.S./J.D., A.M./J.D., M.Div./J.D., OR PH.D./J.D.
WITH THE LAW SCHOOL

The Divinity School and the University’s Law School offer a dual degree program for students whose professional plans require training both in religion and law. For more information, contact: The Dean of Students, The University of Chicago Law School, 1111 East 60th Street, Chicago, Illinois 60637 (phone: 773-702-9484; fax: 773-834-0942; e-mail: admissions@law.uchicago.edu; Web site: http://www.law.uchicago.edu).

DUAL M.Div./A.M. WITH THE SCHOOL OF SOCIAL SERVICE ADMINISTRATION

The Divinity School and the University’s School of Social Service Administration offer a dual degree program for students whose professional plans require training in both ministry and social work. For more information, contact: The Dean of Students, The University of Chicago School of Social Service Administration, 969 East 60th Street, Chicago, Illinois 60637 (phone: 773-702-1126; fax: 773-702-0874; e-mail: info@ssa.uchicago.edu; Web site: http://www.ssa.uchicago.edu).
Committees of the Faculty and Areas of Study

Following are brief descriptions of the three committees of the faculty and the ten areas of study in the Divinity School, including faculty resources, general guidelines, area written examinations, and course offerings. The courses listed are illustrative, and there may be additions, deletions, or changes as the faculty deems advisable. In addition, some of the courses listed in a specific area may be cross-listed in other areas. Ministry courses are listed in the previous section on Ministry Programs (see pages 21–26). The courses of instruction in the various areas of study are numbered as follows:

- 30000–39900 Basic courses at the graduate level
- 40000–49900 Advanced and specialized courses at the graduate level
- 50000–59900 Reading, seminar, research, and dissertation courses

These courses are preceded by the following abbreviations for their areas of study:

- AASR Anthropology and Sociology of Religion
- BIBL Biblical Studies
- DVPR Philosophy of Religion
- HCHR History of Christianity
- HIJD History of Judaism
- HREL History of Religions
- ISLM Islamic Studies
- RETH Religious Ethics
- RLIT Religion and Literature
- THEO Theology

Committees of the Faculty

Committee on Constructive Studies in Religion

The Committee on Constructive Studies in Religion brings together faculty and students who understand their work to be largely in the service of constructive (rather than purely historical or exegetical) goals. Students will be expected to focus their work within one of the three areas comprised by the Committee, but they will also be expected to gain an understanding of the relations among these areas, and to do at least one of their written examinations outside the Committee.

The Committee on Constructive Studies in Religion supplements the written Ph.D. examinations offered in its areas with three Committee-wide examinations: (1) Metaphysics, (2) Hermeneutics and Religious Reflection, and (3) Issues in Contemporary Theory. Subject to the requirements of his or her area of concentration, a Ph.D. student in the Divinity School may stipulate a Committee-wide examination as one of his or her four written examinations.

COMMITTEE ON HISTORICAL STUDIES IN RELIGION

The Committee on Historical Studies in Religion concentrates on the development of Western religious traditions, primarily Judaism and Christianity, from their origins to the present. Special areas of interest include the formation and interpretation of the Jewish and Christian scriptures, the history of Jewish thought, as well as the social, cultural, and intellectual history of Christianity in all periods.

The Committee on Historical Studies in Religion supplements the written Ph.D. examinations offered in its areas with one Committee-wide examination: History of Comparative Exegesis: Jewish and Christian. Subject to the requirements of his or her area of concentration, a Ph.D. student in the Divinity School may stipulate the Committee-wide examination as one of his or her four written examinations.

COMMITTEE ON RELIGION AND THE HUMAN SCIENCES

The Committee on Religion and the Human Sciences engages in the humanistic study of religious traditions and phenomena, and studies literature and society in relation to religion. Faculty and students associated with the Committee give primacy to humanistic and social scientific methods of study that have become established in the academic community during the nineteenth and twentieth centuries. They examine, evaluate, and utilize many of the analytic tools and conceptual categories of the human sciences. Though each of the areas that constitutes part of the Committee may draw on both the methods and materials of the other areas, each has its own distinctive profile. History of Religions emphasizes historical, phenomenological, and comparative studies; Anthropology and Sociology of Religion concentrates on the social and cultural context of religious experiences, communities, and practices; and Religion and Literature focuses on the critical and interpretive study of literary texts.

Faculty: W. Doniger, M. Kapstein, B. Lincoln, F. Meltzer, M. Murrin, M. Riesebrodt, J. Robinson, R. Rosengarten, C. Wedemeyer, M. Zeghal.

AREAS OF STUDY

ANTHROPOLOGY AND SOCIOLOGY OF RELIGION

The ASR area studies religious phenomena from a social scientific point of view. This view is based on the strategy to explain all social phenomena as if they were nothing but products of the dynamics of social relations. This perspective has been rather successful and has been appropriated by many other, especially historical, disciplines. However, it should not be mistaken for an ontological statement.

The dynamics of social relations can be analyzed from a more social structuralist or a more culturalist perspective. Social structuralists (from systems theories to network theories) tend to explain cultural phenomena more or less as derivative of structures of social relations. Culturalists (from anthropological theories of culture to interpretative sociological approaches) maintain that structures of social relations and cultural structures of meaning mutually constitute and influence each other and therefore have to be studied in their dialectical relationship.
The ASR area regards structures of social relations alone as an insufficient foundation for the understanding and explanation of social phenomena. If human action is centrally based on interests, these interests are shaped not only by the position of actors in a social structure but also by the ways in which actors interpret that position. In other words, “interests” are not naturally given but culturally and socially shaped as well as subjectively appropriated and interpreted.

Firmly grounded in an approach that treats the study of social structures and culture as interrelated, the ASR area’s major questions revolve around topics like the following: What is the role played by religious actors and institutions in a given social/cultural setting? What is the contribution of religions in the legitimation or contestation of authority? How are domains of religious interests socially and culturally configured? How does religion impact processes of social transformation or is impacted by them? How do religions contribute to the shaping of a specific habitus?

Accordingly, the ASR area studies religious phenomena as social and cultural facts and constructs, which can be apprehended through textual sources or through the ethnography of contemporary social settings, or through a combination of both methods.

Written Examinations

Students have to take two exams in the area, and two exams in other areas of the Divinity School, chosen in consultation with their advisor.

ASR offers six examinations. ASR1 and ASR2 assess the ways in which “religion” as an analytical concept has been defined and theorized in anthropological and sociological literature. The first exam focuses on classical theoretical perspectives on religion from the early mid-twentieth century; the second examines theories from the middle of the nineteenth to the mid-twentieth century to the present. ASR3 addresses the formation and transformation of religious groups and ideas in the contexts of colonialism, post-colonialism and globalization. ASR4 focuses on theorizing the relationship between Islam and power in sociology, anthropology as well as political science. ASR5 explores different religious visions of history, like utopianism, millenarianism, messianism, and fundamentalism. ASR6 focuses on French sociology and anthropology of religion.

1. Classical Theories
2. Contemporary Theories
3. From Colonialism to Globalization
4. Modern Islam and Power
5. Religious Ideologies and Utopias
6. French Sociology and Anthropology of Religion

The Biblical Studies area seeks to understand and interpret the Jewish and Christian scriptures and related texts in their historical and cultural settings as well as in their subsequent roles as canonical texts for Judaism and Christianity. Contributing to these goals are four distinct areas of research: the historical contexts of these scriptures from ancient Israel to the Roman empire, the history and transmission of biblical and post-biblical literature, the history and methods of exegesis, and biblical and post-biblical theology.

Written Examinations

The area offers two exams in Hebrew Bible and two in New Testament. Ph.D. students concentrating in Biblical Studies must take the two exams offered in one of these, and select their third exam from the two offered in the other.

1. History and Religion of Israel
2. Hebrew Scripture
3. Christian Origins

History of Christianity

The History of Christianity area focuses on one major western religious tradition, in itself and in its interactions with other religions and cultures across time. The area fosters knowledge of the range of communities claiming an identity as "Christian" from the first through the twenty-first centuries, as well as allowing for individual specialization in a particular movement or historical moment, including ancient Christianity (to Constantine), late antique and medieval Christianity, the Reformation and early modernity, the Puritan movement, and American Christianity and American religion in general. Coursework and guided research emphasize the acquisition of essential skills of documentary and artifactual interpretation, critical appraisal of a range of methodological approaches to the material, and a sophisticated appreciation of the tasks, goals and audiences of historiographical writing. The construction of this area is based on the assumption that there are major issues that apply and extend to all periods (such as forms of biblical interpretation, means of adjudicating "orthodoxy" and "heresy," the relationship between Christian communities and the social order, forms of institutional and personal piety), as well as particular expressions of those dynamics in different chronological and geographical settings. It also assumes the need for integration of intellectual, social, institutional and cultural histories for interpreting the body of existing evidence and adequately addressing most important questions about this particular religious tradition in its various manifestations. Students in the HC area are encouraged to formulate an interdisciplinary approach to their research, through coursework throughout the areas of the Divinity School and the University (including the Department of History).

Written Examinations

A student in the area is expected to take three of the four examinations, and must complete at least one major course in the area of the examination they are not taking.

The History of Christianity area offers four written examinations:
1. Ancient (to 600 CE)
2. Medieval (600-1300)
3. Early Modern (1300-1600)
4. Modern (1600-present)

History of Judaism

The History of Judaism area seeks to provide an introduction to Jewish thought and interpretation from biblical antiquity through its classical, medieval, and modern expressions. In addition to the courses listed below, students are encouraged to consult course offerings in the Departments of History, Near Eastern Languages and Civilizations, and Philosophy; the Committee on Social Thought; and the Law School, where deemed relevant.

Written Examinations

Ph.D. students concentrating in History of Judaism take two of the three exams and select their remaining exam from a different area.

1. Ancient Judaism
2. Medieval Judaism
3. Modern Judaism

The History of Religions area approaches religion as an exclusively human phenomenon, via the methods of the social sciences and the humanities. It is concerned to theorize at a high level of generalization, informed by broadly comparative and empirical research, and to carry out high-level empirical research informed by theoretical reflection. It pays self-conscious and explicit attention to problems of epistemology, terminology, category formation, method and motive. Irreverent by temperament and sometimes on principle, it insists that [a] the Western monotheisms should not be the only paradigms and/or objects of legitimate study, [b] religion cannot be reduced to belief, but also includes issues of practices, institutions, communities, habitus and other factors that often operate below the level of consciousness, and [c] interpretation involves critical probing and systematic interrogation of the idealized self-representations of any religious phenomenon.

Those who work within the History of Religions are expected to become thoroughly acquainted with the development of the History of Religions as an academic discipline, and to have a sophisticated understanding of the theories and methods that are relevant to contemporary research in the field. Each student must deal creatively with the tension that results from an emphasis on the importance of historically contextualized studies on the one hand, and of wide-ranging theoretical and comparative research on the other.

Students in the History of Religions develop a special expertise in the study of at least one particular religious tradition. This involves learning to read and/or speak the relevant language (or languages) and becoming familiar with the relevant historical and cultural background. In addition, each student is expected to become informed about a variety of other religious traditions, both historical and contemporary. Students utilize the extensive resources provided by the University as a whole, enhancing their study of particular religious traditions by work in Area Studies departments (such as SALC, NELC, EALC, and Classics) and refining their critical method by work in disciplinary departments (such as History and Anthropology).

Islamic Studies

The Islamic Studies area engages in the study of Islam as a textual tradition inscribed in history and as understood in particular cultural contexts. The area seeks to provide an introduction to and a specialization in Islam through a variety of expressions (literary, poetic, social, and political) and through a variety of methods (literary criticism, hermeneutics, history, sociology, and anthropology). It offers opportunities to specialize in fields that include Qur’anic studies, Sufi literature, Islam and power, and contemporary manifestations of Islam. In addition to the courses listed below, students are encouraged to consult related course offerings in other areas of the Divinity School and in other university departments such as History, Near Eastern Languages and Civilizations, and South Asian Languages and Civilizations.

Students without an advanced degree apply for admission to the A.M. program of the Divinity School. Students applying from within the University of Chicago A.M. program will be expected to have completed three courses in the Islamic Studies area or the equivalent (to be established by consultation and petition) by the end of the A.M. All applicants for Ph.D. admission should have a strong preparation for the study of Islam, including reading knowledge of classical and Modern Standard Arabic, significant background in the study of the human or social sciences, and previous coursework in Islamic history, religion, civilization, or literature. The application letter should specify the applicant's background in the study of Arabic. If at the time of application the applicant has not already completed the equivalent of three years of Arabic, the candidate should indicate the program of current study (including possible summer study) that will demonstrate that at the time of matriculation, he or she will have completed the equivalent of three years of Arabic.

Students at the Ph.D. level are expected to have completed course work in advanced Arabic, in which there is a sustained engagement with Arabic primary sources, or to have carried out significant independent study at an equivalent level, before submission of a dissertation proposal. After consultation with a faculty advisor in Islamic Studies, students may petition to replace either French or German with one of the major languages of literature and scholarship within Islam.

Written Examinations

The Ph.D. qualifying examinations consist of four written examinations and an oral examination based on a research paper submitted for the occasion, in consultation with the student's advisor in the Islamic Studies area. At least two of the four written examinations should be taken in the area of Islamic Studies. At least one of the four examinations should be taken in an area outside of Islamic Studies.

Examinations in Islamic Studies include:
1. Qur'anic Studies
2. Sufi Literature
3. Modern Islam and Power
4. Islamic Reform and Revival (Nineteenth-Twentieth Centuries)
5. Islamic Philosophy

PHILOSOPHY OF RELIGION

The Philosophy of Religion area considers philosophical issues arising from various religious beliefs and practices, and from critical reflection upon them. Work in this area requires historical understanding of the discipline as it developed in the West, but it is also possible to specialize in the philosophical thought of a non-Western religious tradition, as well as to do constructive philosophical work that draws upon the resources of more than one tradition.

Written Examinations

Ph.D. students concentrating in the Philosophy of Religion area are required to take three exams offered by the area. All students are required to take PRI, “The Modern Background,” and one of two exams focused on particular thinkers and trends from the twentieth century: either PR2, “Anglo-American Philosophy of Religion in the Twentieth Century,” or PR3, “Continental Philosophy of Religion in the Twentieth Century.” A third exam emphasizing work in the field is also required, and its selection will typically be a function of the student’s particular area of focus. For students pursuing a program of comparative work, this will normally be one of the exams under the rubric of PR4, “Comparative Philosophy of Religion” (e.g., an exam in Indian Buddhist philosophy); for students not pursuing a program of comparative work, the third exam will normally be the other of the two twentieth-century exams. In some cases, students not pursuing a program in comparative work may select as the third exam one of those offered by the Committee on Constructive Studies (“Metaphysics,” “Hermeneutics and Religious Reflection,” or “Issues in Contemporary Theory”). The student’s examining committee should include at least four faculty examiners, three of whom should be members of the Philosophy of Religion faculty.

1. The Modern Background
2. Anglo-American Philosophy of Religion in the Twentieth Century
3. Continental Philosophy of Religion in the Twentieth Century
4. Comparative Philosophy of Religion

RELIGION AND LITERATURE

Religion and Literature studies the interactions of the religions with cultural forms and practices, with particular reference to art. It pursues this study utilizing the tools of poetics, aesthetics, and theories of interpretation to understand both the ways that the religions harness the human imagination, and the ways that the human recourse to imaginative expression often — some would say always — engages religion. Although this phenomenon is arguably concurrent with all of human history, the academic enterprise of Religion and Literature is by comparison young. It took its initial explicit form in response to the conviction, articulated most forcefully by Paul Tillich in the mid-twentieth century, that in order to understand religion we must engage our “cultural condition.” In its relatively short life the field has witnessed the more widely recognized shifts in the study of religion that had their advent just as Tillich’s own remarkable career was concluding, and the field has since aimed toward more self-conscious engagements with comparison (both within a culture and across cultures) and with history. We recognize the texts and artifacts we study to be both more knowingly pluralistic, and often more intentionally eclectic, than had been assumed. We aim to address the pressure this exerts on conventional rubrics of cultural study such as nation, language, “high art” and — not incidentally — the self-proclaimed provenances of the religions. As a consequence a comparative frame of reference, both within a culture and across cultures, has become essential. This broader compass of cultural practice has also led to a revision of the area’s interests in the history of interpretive theory, to engage not only literary criticism but hermeneutics, biblical interpretation, and aesthetics. The area seeks to be interdisciplinary in its work, so that students pursue sustained work in other areas of study in the Divinity School and in other departments and committees of the University as informed and directed by the area’s emphasis on the acquisition the skills of close, sustained interpretive analysis and broad engagement with issues in the theory of interpretation.

RELIGIOUS ETHICS

The Religious Ethics area is concerned with the meaning of religion for the conduct of the lives of persons and the ordering of societies, and, therefore, with problems of the good life, justice, and the common good. Study in the history and methods of religious and non-religious ethics is essential to work in the area. The examination of specific moral problems and the study of comparative religious ethics require work in the relevant languages, social and historical sciences or in the professions. Students are thereby encouraged to pursue work in pertinent areas of the University outside of the Divinity School.

Written Examinations

A student concentrating in Religious Ethics will take three examinations in the area, including at least two of the following: (1) Philosophical Ethics; (2) Theological Ethics; (3) Ethics and Political Life. The student must select another, third examination from those offered by the area.

A student concentrating in Religious Ethics will submit for the oral examination a twenty- to twenty-five-page paper that typically engages one major thinker, relevant primary materials, and also important secondary scholarship with respect to a question pertinent to the student’s scholarly aspirations. This paper should, accordingly, explicate and assess the thinker(s) chosen and also advance, through that engagement, a constructive argument on the question. The paper should be distributed to examiners at least two weeks prior to the oral examination.
The distinctive purpose of the oral examination is to engage the submitted paper and pursue other lines of inquiry, especially, but not limited to, the written examinations.

1. Philosophical Ethics
2. Theological Ethics
3. Ethics and Political Life
4. Ethics and the Social Sciences
5. Comparative Religious Ethics
6. Moral Problems

THEOLOGY

The Theology area is concerned with the historical study of the self-understanding of a religious tradition, mainly Christianity and Judaism, and with the constructive interpretation of its meaning and truth for the contemporary world. Students in theology must, thereby, address questions of the history of theology, the definitive characteristics of theological claims and discourse, the criteria of meaning and of truth within a tradition, methods of theological reflection, the warrant (if any) for revision within traditions, and the manifold ways to answer or to sustain the criticism of theological ideas and religious beliefs. Students in theology thereby demonstrate their historical competence, methodological sophistication, and also grounding in some specific form of theological reflection.

Written Examinations

Students concentrating in Theology take three exams from those offered by the area. These choices should be determined, in consultation with the relevant faculty, on the basis of the student’s intended scholarly focus in the field. All students are required to take at least two of the three offered examinations in the History of Christian Thought (i.e., exams 1, 2, and 3). In all Theology examinations attention will be given to the use of scripture in the pertinent tradition as a theological source and norm, and the student will be expected to know the exegetical foundations of the theological positions discussed. The examinations will also test historical understanding and the ability to deal critically and, when appropriate, constructively with theological texts.

Given the purpose of the examinations in the Theology area stated above, all examinations will have “set bibliographies,” meaning thereby that examinations are not tailored to the student’s dissertation topic. Additionally, a student may not take an examination of a perspective, theologian, or doctrine that is the principle focus of his or her intended dissertation.

1. History of Christian Thought, 150–1325 (Ancient and Medieval)
2. History of Christian Thought, 1277–1600 (Early Modern)
3. History of Modern Religious Thought (1600–1950)
4. A Constructive Theological Perspective (e.g., liberation, feminist, mystical, process theologies)
5. A Major Theologian or Doctrine (e.g., Augustine; Christology)

Research Paper

In addition to taking the written examinations, a student concentrating in Theology will submit for the oral examination a research paper that typically engages a thinker or problem, relevant primary materials, and also important secondary scholarship with respect to the student’s scholarly aspirations. This paper is to be no longer than twenty-five, double-spaced pages, and must follow rubrics of The Chicago Manual of Style. Students should consult with their adviser about the most suitable paper for submission for the examination. If possible, the paper should represent some preliminary thoughts about a possible thesis topic.
As a preface research paper, the Theology area would like each student to submit a one-page summary of the significance of the paper in light of the student's future work in the area. This statement should include: (1) a summary of the thesis of the paper; (2) a statement of how this paper relates to the student's current theological interests. The completed paper with preface should be distributed to all of the examiners at least two weeks prior to the time of the oral examination.

RESIDENCE REQUIREMENTS

While the faculty that recommends the award of a degree establishes its academic requirements, the University establishes the residence requirements for those degrees. The unit of residence is the academic year, which normally consists of three consecutive quarters of enrollment, beginning with the autumn quarter.

Graduate students at the University register according to a two-stage residence structure. (Residence status denotes a registration identity. It does not relate to a student’s physical place of residence.)

1. Scholastic Residence. All first-year students at the Divinity School register in Scholastic Residence. One year of Scholastic Residence fulfills the residence requirement for the A.M.R.S. degree. Two years fulfills the residence requirement for the A.M. degree. Three years fulfills the residence requirement for the M.Div. degree. Ph.D. students must complete four years of Scholastic Residence as part of their residence requirement, but those who hold a master’s degree at the time of matriculation normally have that requirement reduced to three years.

2. Advanced Residence. After completion of the required Scholastic Residence, all students register in Advanced Residence. M.Div. students who do not complete the degree during the period of Scholastic Residence may register for up to one year of Advanced Residence for the purpose of completing outstanding requirements for the degree. Ph.D. students may register in Advanced Residence for a maximum of eight years.

Students in Advanced Residence are eligible for all the privileges and rights of full-time students, such as access to the Primary Care Group (the University’s health service) and medical insurance coverage, University housing, computer facilities, libraries, career and placement services, and athletic facilities. Provided they are not employed twenty hours a week or more in a job unrelated to their dissertation research, and subject to other federal and state student loan policies, students in Advanced Residence are eligible for student loans and deferment of loan payments.
A student in Advanced Residence whose dissertation research requires residence away from Chicago may register Pro Forma, upon recommendation from the area of study and approval by the Dean of Students. Normally students applying for Pro Forma status will have been admitted to candidacy and have had their dissertation topic approved by the Committee on Degrees. Renewal for a second year requires approval from the Dean of Students. Pro Forma registration does not count toward the residence requirements for a degree.

Leave of Absence is a formal status for students in Scholastic Residence who suspend work toward a degree but who expect to resume work after a maximum of one academic year. Such leave must be approved by both the student’s area of study and the Dean of Students. If, at the conclusion of an approved Leave of Absence, studies are not resumed, the student will be withdrawn from the University. After the student enters Advanced Residence, a Leave of Absence can be granted only when involuntary causes, such as illness or injury, prevent progress in the program. A Leave of Absence from Advanced Residence must be approved by the Dean of Students. After any Leave of Absence, the student resumes residence at the point at which studies were interrupted.

Graduate study at the University is normally full time, and references to a certain number of quarters of residence assume full-time enrollment. Any quarter in which a doctoral student is registered part time counts as one-half of a full quarter of residence in that status. Requests for part-time status must be approved by the Dean of Students in the Divinity School. In any quarter in which an A.M. or Ph.D. student is registered part time, the tuition charged will be one-half of the full tuition of the appropriate residence status.
The registration and residence requirements reflect a structure of graduate tuition that links charges to residence status. Students will be assessed the prevailing full tuition rate only for the period of Scholastic Residence. A lower level will apply to any years of Advanced Residence. Tuition is not charged for Pro Forma registration, though a fee is assessed each quarter. No tuition is assessed when a student is on a Leave of Absence.

After the elapse of twelve years from the date on which they began their doctoral programs, students who have not completed their Ph.D.’s must enter the status of Extended Residence. Students are expected to register in at least three of the four quarters of every year they spend in Extended Residence, typically the autumn, winter, and spring quarters. Extended Residence is not defined by the University as a full-time student status.

Students in Extended Residence are entitled to use of the University libraries, as well as access to faculty, e-mail accounts, and the University’s electronic network. They are not eligible for any of the other benefits associated with full-time student status. Students remain registered in Extended Residence until they complete their Ph.D.’s. If a student in Extended Residence receives a grant or fellowship requiring registration in full-time student status, the student will register in Advanced Residence for the duration of the fellowship.

SPECIAL COURSES and PROGRAMS

SUPPORTING COURSES

Registration in these special courses allows advanced students to pursue individualized studies within the Divinity School:

- DVSC 42000 Divinity School German Reading Exam
- DVSC 45100 Reading Course: Special Topic. Staff
- DVSC 49900 Exam Preparation. Staff (for doctoral students in the quarter they take the qualifying examination)
- DVSC 50100–300 Research. Staff
- DVSC 59900 Thesis Work. Staff

Reading and independent study courses are intended to supplement regular course offerings and not to duplicate them.

THE JERALD BRAUER SEMINAR

Established by friends of the Divinity School to encourage interdisciplinary teaching and research, the Brauer Seminar is cotaught periodically by two Divinity School faculty members. The topic changes according to the interest of the instructors. Up to ten students may participate with the consent of the instructors, and each student receives a stipend of $1,000 to support participation. A seminar budget supports the honorarium and travel expenses for the Brauer Fellow, a visiting scholar who represents a disciplinary perspective on the seminar topic that complements those of the instructors. The Brauer Fellow leads one or two seminar sessions and delivers a public lecture at the Divinity School. In Winter 2004, Professors Paul Mendes-Flohr and William Schweiker

COMMITTEE ON JEWISH STUDIES

In its Division of the Humanities, the University has established a program of study leading to the master’s and doctoral degrees in Jewish Studies. Composed of just over twenty faculty members from throughout the University, the Committee supports disciplinary and interdisciplinary study of Jewish languages, literatures, and civilization in their historical and cultural contexts. The Committee also sponsors a workshop that meets throughout the year to bring together faculty and students from the diverse range of departments represented in the Committee to discuss topics related to ongoing research. The A.M. program in Jewish Studies may lead to doctoral work in either the Committee on Jewish Studies, the Divinity School, or the Department of Near Eastern Languages and Civilizations.

DEPARTMENT OF NEW TESTAMENT AND EARLY CHRISTIAN LITERATURE

This department, within the Humanities Division of the University, is another venue for the study of early Christianity. Chaired by Professor David Martinez, the department (referred to as ECL) is staffed by faculty from the Divinity School (Professors Klauck, Martinez, and Mitchell) and Classics (Professors Asmis, Faraone, Saller, and White), and has as its focus critical inquiry on: (1) the interpretation of the range of documents produced by Christians in roughly the first four centuries, and (2) the religious, cultural, and social makeup of the communities and persons within the Roman Empire during this period who were identified (by themselves and by others) as Christian. Those who wish to engage in research explicitly at the intersection of New Testament and patristic writings and the classical world will find in this department a rich array of resources and interdisciplinary conversations to enhance that work. The curriculum within ECL emphasizes students’ acquisition of broad competence in the languages, literatures, and histories of the Greco-Roman world, in addition to a developed knowledge of the emergence of an extensive Christian literary culture in the period up to the death of Augustine (430 ad). By contrast, although it holds the twenty-seven documents of the New Testament in common, the Biblical Studies area of the Divinity School focuses on fostering strong interpretive skills in both Hebrew Bible/Old Testament and New Testament, and their wider historical contexts. Furthermore, it engages seriously issues of the role of canonical scriptures in the religious traditions of Judaism and Christianity, and the broad scope of the history of interpretation and effects of those texts. The curriculum and examination structure of the Divinity School also allow interested students to do significant work in such areas as theology, hermeneutics, ethics, and theories of the study of religion, whereas students in ECL will devote more of their time to broad reading in classical history, religion, and literature.
PROGRAMES IN CLINICAL PASTORAL EDUCATION

The University of Chicago Hospitals offers programs in Clinical Pastoral Education (CPE) throughout the year for a limited number of students. These are accredited by the Association for Clinical Pastoral Education, Inc. For further information, write to: Chaplaincy Services, Box 215, University of Chicago Hospitals, 5841 South Maryland Avenue, Chicago, Illinois 60637.

TRAVELING SCHOLAR PROGRAMS

The University participates in two exchange programs for doctoral students wishing to take advantage of special resources not available on campus (special courses, library collections, professors, and so forth). These programs are the CIC Traveling Scholar Program with the “Big Ten” universities and the Exchange Scholar Program with the following universities: University of California at Berkeley, Brown University, Columbia University, Cornell University, Harvard University, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, University of Pennsylvania, Princeton University, Stanford University, and Yale University. Students wishing to become Traveling Scholars should discuss plans with their advisers and with the Dean of Students, and, if approved, obtain an application at the Office of Graduate Affairs. Credits earned at the host university are automatically accepted at the University of Chicago. Traveling Scholar status can be for up to one academic year and is subject to approval by both the home and host school graduate deans.

GRADUATE WORKSHOPS IN THE HUMANITIES

The University sponsors graduate research workshops in the humanities that meet throughout the academic year. Organized by faculty and students with common research interests, they vary in format, but participants in a typical seminar come from diverse schools, departments, and divisions of the University. M.DIV./PH.D. PROGRAM FOR HYDE PARK SEMINARY STUDENTS

By virtue of an agreement between the Divinity School and the Lutheran School of Theology at Chicago, McCormick Theological Seminary, and the Catholic Theological Union, a student enrolled in the Master of Divinity (M.Div.) degree program at one of these seminaries may undertake a coordinated program of studies with the intent of gaining admission to the Ph.D. program at the Divinity School. The coordinated M.Div./Ph.D. program allows a student at one of these seminaries to pursue the normal course of M.Div. studies at the home institution while completing certain requirements for admission to the Divinity School’s Ph.D. program.

After completing two years of full-time study at one of these Hyde Park seminaries, the student may apply for admission to the Ph.D. program in the Divinity School in the winter quarter of the third year if the following conditions have been met: (a) prior endorsement of the dean of the student’s home seminary; (b) completion of sufficient course work at the Divinity School, including at least three courses of bi-registration at the Divinity School in the area of proposed Ph.D. concentration.

THE GRADUATE STUDENT-AT-LARGE PROGRAM

The Graduate Student-at-Large program is designed for adults who would like to return to school to work toward a master’s or doctoral degree but are uncertain about the best school or division in which to do their work. Any graduate course may be selected. The program also serves people who have no immediate degree plans but for whom quality grade and credit study would be appropriate. Full academic credit is given and copies of transcripts may be requested whenever needed. A Student-at-Large who later wishes to become a degree candidate must supply additional credentials and meet all the usual requirements for regular admission to the University. If admitted as a regular student, up to three courses taken as a Student-at-Large may be transferred, with the approval of the degree-granting department, to a degree program at the University of Chicago.

Students enrolled in institutions that do not have formal exchange or traveling scholar programs with the University should apply as Graduate Students-at-Large if they wish to study at the University for a specific period of time and have the work transferred for credit to their home institution.

Further information and applications for the Graduate Student-at-Large program are available from: The Returning Scholar/Graduate Student-at-Large Programs, Graham School of General Studies, 1427 East 60th Street, Chicago, Illinois 60637 (phone: 773-702-1726; fax: 773-702-6814; e-mail: gsal-rs@uchicago.edu; web site: http://grahamschool.uchicago.edu/index.cfm).

PRIZES

Each year, the Divinity School awards prizes for specific student achievements:

1. The Milo P. Jewett Prize is awarded annually in the spring quarter “to that member of the student body of the Divinity School who shall be pronounced by competent judges to have submitted the best-written paper translating, interpreting, or applying to a contemporary situation the Holy Scriptures, or a passage therefrom, regard being had to the most effective expression to the meaning and spirit of the sacred text.” In recent years, the money has also funded travel for research by advanced students concentrating in Biblical Studies. Recent winners of the Jewett Prize include:
   - 2007 Justin Howell and Jeffrey Jay
   - 2004 Claudia Bergman, Patricia Duncan, Stephen Okey, and Rebecca Waltenberger

2. The John Gray Rhind Award has been presented annually since 1979 to an advanced student in the ministry program at the Divinity School whose... excellence in academic and professional training gives notable promise of a significant contribution to the life of the church. Recent winners of the Rhind Award include:

2007  Benjamin J. Dueholm
2006  Alicia N. Creyts and Nicole E. Urbach
2005  Laura Jean Torgerson

3. The Susan Colver-Rosenberger Educational Prize is awarded annually in rotation to a Ph.D. student in education, theology, or sociology. The object of the prize is to stimulate constructive study and original research and to develop practical ideas for the improvement of educational objectives and methods or for the promotion of human welfare. The most recent Divinity School graduates to receive the Colver-Rosenberger Prize are:

2004  Jonathan Gold and Paul Kollman

4. The J. Coert Rylaarsdam Prize is awarded annually to reward a deserving Divinity School student who has made special efforts to promote interfaith relations with particular reference to the Christian, Jewish, and Muslim traditions. These efforts may be curricular or extracurricular. Recent winners of the Rylaarsdam Prize include:

2005  Elizabeth Bucar
2004  Laura Hollinger

GRADING SYSTEM and OFFICIAL RECORDS

GRADING SYSTEM
The course marks used in the Divinity School are A, B, C, D, P, F, and I. The marks A, B, C, D, with or without + or - modifiers, and the mark P are passing marks for courses in which students have registered for course credit.

The mark F indicates unsatisfactory work and carries no course credit.

The mark P may be used only for general course examinations following a quarter of instruction or for seminar and research courses numbered 30000 and above.

The mark I indicates that the student registered for course credit but has not submitted all the evidence required for a qualitative grade, and has made satisfactory arrangements with the instructor to complete the work. The mark I is given only under special circumstances, and the final determination to do so rests with the instructor.

COURSE CREDITS
A student who is registered for a course and successfully completes the requirements as prescribed by the instructor receives credit for the course on the records of the University. The student’s record, indicating the units of instruction successfully completed together with the marks received in the various courses, may be used for transferring course credits to another university.

TRANSFERS BETWEEN DEGREE PROGRAMS
Because a student’s academic and professional interests can change, even at the doctoral level, the Divinity School provides procedures for transfers between degree programs. In general, transfers will be considered within the quarter they are presented. Any petition by a student to transfer to another program after admission but before registration is subject to review by the Committee on Admissions and Aid in consultation with the appropriate persons in the respective programs.

An enrolled student who wishes to transfer from one degree program to another should submit an application for transfer to the Dean of Students Office. The application must be approved by both the releasing and accepting programs.

In some circumstances, a Ph.D. student who already has had the course of study petition approved by the Committee on Degrees may wish to change the academic focus of that program from one to another of the nine areas of Ph.D. study. Such a change requires the submission of a new course of study petition outlining the revised course of Ph.D. study, and requesting transfer to the new area. Students should be advised that admission to the Ph.D. program is by specific area, and that petitions to transfer from one area to another require the approval of both areas and are not automatic. Financial aid for transfers is subject to review by the Committee on Admissions and Aid, which will take into account the recommendations of the releasing and accepting programs or areas of study.

APPLICATION FOR DEGREE

The University holds commencement exercises at the conclusion of each academic quarter. A student who has completed the requirements of his or her degree program—A.M., A.M.R.S., M.Div., Ph.D.—may apply to receive the degree as soon as the next quarter’s scheduled commencement.

To receive the degree, the student must file an application for degree online no later than the first day of the quarter in which he or she expects to receive the degree. If the student does not receive the degree that quarter, a new application must be filed for the quarter in which it is next expected.

In some cases, a Ph.D. candidate may wish to apply to receive the degree prior to having received final approval of the dissertation from the dissertation reading committee. Ph.D. candidates should consult with their dissertation adviser and the Dean of Students about the advisability of making such application under the specific circumstances.

Transcripts

A student may request a transcript of his or her academic record or certification of student status by contacting the Office of the University Registrar, 5801 South Ellis Avenue, Room 103, Chicago, Illinois 60637 (web site: http://registrar.uchicago.edu/transcripts.html). Fees may apply.
ADMISSIONS

Normally a student is qualified to study in the Divinity School if he or she has an A.B. degree or its equivalent with a good academic record from an accredited college or university. Applicants to master’s level programs are not required either to have majored or to have done concentrated work in religious studies in their undergraduate programs, although broad training in the liberal arts is expected. Applicants to the doctoral program must have completed, or must be in the process of completing, a master’s degree from an accredited institution in order to be considered for admission. Students from the United States who do not have an A.B. degree or its equivalent, or who come from an unaccredited institution, should write to the Dean of Students of the Divinity School concerning eligibility for admission. All students from outside the United States should contact the Dean of Students in sufficient time to determine eligibility and to complete the application process.

Enrollment in the Divinity School is limited each year. The Committee on Admissions and Aid selects for admission only applicants who, in its judgment, appear both best qualified and most capable of using the resources that the Divinity School provides.

In keeping with its long-standing traditions and policies, in matters of admissions, employment, and access to programs, the University of Chicago considers students on the basis of individual merit and without regard to race, color, religion, sex, sexual orientation, national or ethnic origin, age, disability, or other factors irrelevant to participation in the programs of the University. The Affirmative Action Officer (phone: 773-702-5671) is the University official responsible for coordinating its adherence to this policy and with the related federal and state laws and regulations (including Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 as amended).

Applications for admission to the A.M., A.M.R.S., and Ph.D. programs and for financial aid should be submitted by December 15 for the following autumn quarter. Applications for admission to the M.Div. program and for financial aid should be submitted by February 1 for the following autumn quarter. (Exceptions to this policy are rare, but may be granted by the Dean of Students.)

All inquiries concerning admissions should be addressed to the Dean of Students in the Divinity School. Applications are online at https://grad-application.uchicago.edu.

GENERAL PROCEDURES FOR APPLICATION

To be considered for admission, each applicant must submit to the Dean of Students the following documentation:

1. A completed Divinity School Application for Graduate Admission, including the required application fee. Applicants to the A.M., A.M.R.S., and M.Div. programs must submit an essay reflecting intellectual influences and professional goals. Applicants to the Ph.D. program must, in addition to this essay, submit an essay outlining their proposed course of study.

2. Official transcripts of academic record from every institution of higher learning that the applicant has attended.
3. Four letters of recommendation. A minimum of two recommendations must be academic in nature. In some cases, the other two recommendations may be of broader scope and may concern the applicant’s interests and motivation, character, and general intellectual abilities.

4. Scores on the Graduate Record Examination (GRE) General Test. Scores more than five years old are unacceptable. Applicants should take the October GRE examinations when possible, although December scores usually arrive in time for admissions and aid decisions. Information regarding the Graduate Record Examination may be obtained from: Graduate Record Examination, P.O. Box 6000, Princeton, New Jersey 08541-6000 (web site: http://www.gre.org). Applicants whose native language is not English may substitute the Test of English as a Foreign Language (TOEFL) or the International English Language Testing System (IELTS) in place of the GRE; see the following section for further details. The school code for both the GRE and the TOEFL is 1832; the department code is 4901.

Credentials of non-matriculants and applicants not admitted are retained by the Divinity School for two years; if the application has not been reactivated by the end of that period, all materials are destroyed. Applicants are not encouraged to submit written materials in addition to those requested in support of their application. All questions regarding applications should be directed to the Dean of Students (see contact information above).

APPLICATIONS FROM FOREIGN COUNTRIES

Applicants from foreign countries should follow the “General Procedures for Application,” as listed in the previous section. Please note, however, that applicants from foreign countries in which English is not the native language, and who will not by their intended time of matriculation at the Divinity School hold an advanced degree based on the completion of written and oral work in English, must complete the Test of English as a Foreign Language (TOEFL) or the International English Language Testing System (IELTS) in support of their application. (Such applicants are not required to submit scores from the Graduate Record Examination.) New calibrations expected for autumn 2005 will result in a minimum required score in the TOEFL of 100 overall, with sub scores of 26 each. Minimum required scores in the IELTS are an overall score of 7, with sub scores of 7 each.

The English language requirement may be waived if the applicant studied in full-time status for at least one academic year within the last five years in the United States, the United Kingdom, Ireland, Australia, New Zealand, or English medium universities in Canada or South Africa. Students who studied in English in other countries—for example, India, Pakistan, the Philippines, Hong Kong, Singapore—are not exempt from the English language requirement.

Please note that TOEFL or IELTS score reports are valid for two years and scores will be considered expired if the test was taken more than two years prior to the application deadline. Photocopies of TOEFL or IELTS score reports will not be considered valid.

For more information on the TOEFL, go to http://www.toefl.org. For more information on the IELTS, go to http://www.ielts.org.
ADMISSION REQUIREMENTS

Applicants to programs leading to a master’s or a doctor of philosophy degree should hold an American bachelor’s degree or an equivalent foreign degree requiring at least sixteen years of primary, secondary, and university education. Applicants should have received basic competence in their fields with excellent academic records (A or B+ and First or Upper Second Class degrees). A student who does not meet the normal academic requirements but who would like to be considered for admission should explain in detail in a separate letter his or her additional qualifications.

TRANSCRIPTS AND CERTIFICATIONS OF RECORDS

Applicants must submit official academic records (transcripts or mark-sheets) with grading scales for each year of post-secondary education (college or university). If detailed transcripts are not available, the certificates must be accompanied by official statements showing the class or quality of the degrees or diplomas as well as marks actually received on degree examinations as compared with the maximum marks obtainable. Official copies of credentials must be validated by a school administrative officer, such as the registrar or an official of the issuing body. Unless institutional policy prohibits, official documents should be assembled by the applicant and sent with all other application materials in the same envelope. Otherwise, the registrar of the institution should forward the transcripts or records directly to the Dean of Students in the Divinity School.

Documents should be issued in their original language. All documents not issued in English must be accompanied by official translations. The translation should be prepared or verified by a person whose position requires knowledge of both English and the pertinent language, i.e., a professor of English at a French university.

To clarify the University’s expectations regarding previous educational achievements of foreign students, specific guidelines are listed below:

Applicants from Europe should submit official records of all university courses and examinations taken and the grades received. Photocopies of each student book, where available, should be certified by a school official.

Applicants from French-patterned educational systems, including Francophone Africa, should have completed, or expect to complete, the Maîtrise or a qualification such as a Diplôme des Grandes Ecoles.

Applicants from British-patterned educational systems, including Anglophone Africa, should have an Honours Bachelor’s Degree in First or Upper Second Division and should present photocopies of their graduate and post-graduate diplomas. A statement showing the division or grade of the degree is necessary, as is an official list enumerating the subjects studied.
Applicants from India, Bangladesh, and Pakistan should have a master’s degree completed by the time of matriculation at the University of Chicago. Applicants should present official certificates or certified copies of the degrees and diplomas earned. Applicants must also submit detailed mark sheets covering the work completed for each year for all degrees. Wherever possible, the rank in the university or in the examination should be indicated. True copies made by the registrar or the appropriate administrative official of the university attended, bearing the official seal and signature, are required. True copies prepared and signed by faculty members, or by city or government officials, are not considered official.

Applicants from Latin America should submit official records of their credentials from all universities attended. An official transcript covering all courses taken and grades received should be submitted for each school attended, together with a photocopy of the degree or diploma received.

Applicants from the Near and Middle East should present university records that describe each subject studied, by years, with grades received and degree or diploma awarded.

Applicants from the People’s Republic of China who have studied at universities since 1978 should present the results of their university entrance examinations in addition to their other transcripts. Records should be presented in Chinese accompanied by an English translation.

Applicants from other East Asian countries should present official detailed transcripts from their universities that include all courses and grades received and degrees awarded.

If the schools attended no longer exist, or if it is impossible to obtain official transcripts from them, applicants should ask the Ministry of Education of the appropriate country to furnish an official statement testifying to the impossibility of obtaining records. Applicants must also ask the Ministry to supply the University of Chicago with a list of the courses ordinarily required by that school or university.

Visas

Admitted international applicants must provide verification of adequate financial support, and submit official records of all academic work completed and degrees received before visa documents can be issued. For further information, applicants should contact the Office of International Affairs, located in International House, 1414 East 59th Street, Chicago, Illinois 60637 (phone: 773-702-7752; fax 773-702-3058; e-mail: international-affairs@uchicago.edu; web site: http://internationalaffairs.uchicago.edu).

TUITION REFUND SCHEDULE
A student who is given approval to withdraw part or all of his or her registration shall be granted a reduction of a portion of the original charge in accordance with the schedule printed in the quarterly “Time Schedules” (see http://timeschedules.uchicago.edu). Approval of the withdrawal, with the date it becomes effective, must be certified by the Dean of Students in the Divinity School.

ESTIMATE OF EXPENSES
Expenses will vary for each student in the Divinity School according to both individual programs and circumstances and the current cost of living. Single students should budget at least $26,896 for 12 months, including fees, books and supplies, and room and board, but not including health insurance. This figure, formulated as of June 2006, is based on the experience of a number of students enrolled in the University and should be regarded as a minimum amount.

FINANCIAL AID
While the principal responsibility for financing graduate and professional education rests with the student and the student’s family, the Divinity School makes every effort to assist admitted students in pursuing their studies at the University of Chicago. It is a high priority of the Divinity School to supplement other funding sources available to the student, including personal savings, guaranteed student loans, part-time employment, and family funds.

Divinity School financial aid awards, based on academic promise, consist of partial and full tuition scholarships and a small number of fellowships which cover the student’s full tuition and provide a stipend toward living expenses. These awards are direct grants that require no service to the University in exchange. Scholarship moneys are credited directly to the student’s account with the University Bursar. Stipendiary moneys, allocated on a quarterly basis, are available on the first day of the quarter.

The Committee on Admissions and Aid seeks to provide continuing support at a level consistent with the student’s academic performance and financial aid eligibility. The Committee makes awards on the basis of a full-time academic program unless otherwise specified in the financial aid application. If a student registers for a part-time course of study, the amount of the award will be reassessed at the time of registration.

Only degree students are eligible for financial aid. A.M.R.S. students are eligible for financial aid for one year of Scholastic Residence. A.M. in Divinity students are eligible for financial aid for two years of Scholastic Residence, with the award made at the time of admission for the initial year automatically renewed for the second year. (The financial aid awards of A.M. in Divinity students are reevaluated at the time of doctoral admission.) Ph.D. students are eligible for financial aid for the years of Scholastic Residence in addition to the standard financial aid award provided for students in Advanced Residence. M.Div. students are eligible for financial aid for three years of Scholastic Residence and up to one year of Advanced Residence.
In addition to providing direct grants, the Divinity School cooperates with other University offices in helping students utilize additional financial resources, such as the various guaranteed student loan programs, the Work-Study program, and other part-time employment opportunities. Many students find both student loans and part-time employment helpful in financing their graduate and professional education.

The Divinity School does not presume that a student loan is always the best solution to a student's financial need. Indeed, students should take care to avoid unmanageable indebtedness, particularly in light of the larger loan limits approved by the government in recent years. However, each year, more than half the total number of Divinity School students make use of one of the guaranteed student loan programs, and students planning to attend the Divinity School should be prepared to borrow from these programs at some time during their student career, if necessary, in order to help finance their education.

Financial aid letters sent to admitted students concern only direct grants from the Divinity School. Although most grants to Divinity School students are handled by the Dean of Students Office in the Divinity School, the University's Student Loan Administrator handles student loan matters for all University of Chicago students, including students in the Divinity School. Students admitted for the autumn quarter who wish to be considered for a student loan must submit a loan application to that office by June 1; notifications concerning loan approval are sent out in August. The Student Loan Administrator also determines eligibility for the College Work-Study program, but job assignments cannot be made until the student is actually on campus.

Both on- and off-campus part-time employment opportunities for Divinity School students and spouses are abundant. Job opportunities are limited only by one's energy and resourcefulness. Almost all Divinity School students work during some phase of their graduate studies. For further information, see the section on employment on page 59.

Unlike other residence statuses, no financial aid is available during Extended Residence.

FINANCIAL AID FROM SOURCES OUTSIDE THE UNIVERSITY

Divinity School students are encouraged to apply for financial assistance from sources outside the Divinity School in addition to their application for Divinity School financial aid. In fairness to all applicants for Divinity School aid, the Committee on Admissions and Aid requires that persons winning such awards report them promptly; however, adjustments in such persons' financial aid are made only in cases where the outside award substantially reduces the level of financial need. Most such outside awards are, in fact, more modest and may be used to supplement Divinity School financial aid awards.

For more information, students should consult the Office of Graduate Affairs' Fellowship Kiosk at http://grad-affairs.uchicago.edu/felpage.html. The following fellowships are among the most prestigious and remunerative of outside awards:

1. Andrew W. Mellon Fellowships in Humanistic Studies are offered through a national competition. Any college senior or recent graduate who is a U.S. or Canadian citizen is eligible to apply. A faculty member must nominate the student to a regional director. Requests for further information should be

2. Charlotte W. Newcombe Doctoral Dissertation Fellowships support the last full year of research and writing for outstanding doctoral students whose dissertations focus on ethical or religious values and the way those values govern the choices made by people and societies. Requests for further information should be made to: Charlotte W. Newcombe Doctoral Dissertation Fellowships, Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation, P.O. Box 5281, Princeton, New Jersey 08543-5281 (phone: 609-452-7007; fax: 609-452-7828; web site: http://www.woodrow.org/newcombe/).

3. Committee on Institutional Cooperation (CIC) Minorities Fellowships are available to minority students who are U.S. citizens and who wish to study toward the Ph.D. degree in certain specific fields in the social sciences and the humanities (including religious studies) at the University of Chicago or one of the “Big Ten” universities. Two additional years of support will be provided by the student's institution. Requests for further information should be made to: Committee on Institutional Cooperation, 1819 South Neil Street, Suite D, Champaign, Illinois 61820-7271 (phone: 217-333-8475; fax: 217-244-7127; e-mail: cic@uiuc.edu; web site: http://www.cic.uiuc.edu/index.shtml). For information on additional minority student fellowship opportunities, contact the University of Chicago's Office of Minority Student Affairs, 5801 South Ellis Avenue, Chicago, Illinois 60637 (phone: 773-834-4672; e-mail: omsa@uchicago.edu; web site: http://omsa.uchicago.edu/).

4. Disciples Divinity House offers tuition and housing support and an annual living stipend for qualified members of the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) who are pursuing the M.Div., A.M., or Ph.D. degrees at the Divinity School. These scholarships are renewable annually through the time normally required for obtaining the degree. Further information may be requested from: The Disciples Divinity House, 1156 East 57th Street, Chicago, Illinois 60637 (phone: 773-643-4411; fax 773-643-4413; e-mail: ddh.uchicago@attglobal.net; web site: http://ddh.uchicago.edu).

5. Ford Foundation Doctoral Fellowships for Minorities are available on a competitive basis to members of certain minority groups who are U.S. citizens or nationals at the time of application. Both predoctoral and dissertation fellowships are available to support doctoral work in the behavioral and social sciences, the humanities (including religious studies), and certain other fields. Requests for further information should be made to: Ford Foundation Doctoral Fellowships for Minorities, Fellowship Office, GR 346A, National Research Council of the National Academies, 550 Fifth Street, NW, Washington, D.C. 20001 (phone: 202-334-2872; e-mail: infofell@nas.edu; web site: http://www7.nationalacademies.org/fellowships/fordpredoc.html).

6. The Fund for Theological Education, Inc., offers several fellowship programs of interest to both ministry and doctoral students. Further information may be requested from: The Fund for Theological Education, Inc., 825 Houston Mill Road, Suite 250, Atlanta, Georgia 30329 (phone: 404-727-1450; fax: 404-727-1490; web site: http://www.thefund.org).
7. Jacob K. Javits Fellowships support graduate study in selected fields within the arts, humanities, and social sciences. The award, which is renewable for up to four years, covers tuition and fees and includes a stipend. Fourth-year college students and persons who are U.S. citizens or permanent residents, and who have not completed their first year of graduate study, are eligible to apply. Requests for further information should be made to: U.S. Department of Education, OPE, Teacher and Student Development Programs Service, 1990 K Street, NW, Washington, D.C. 20006-8524 (phone: 202-502-7542; fax: 202-502-7859; e-mail: OPE_Javits_Program@ed.gov; web site: http://www.ed.gov/programs/iegpsjavits/index.html).

8. National Resource (Title VI or FLAS) Fellowships are available for graduate study in critical languages and related areas. Only U.S. citizens or those who can prove that they are seeking citizenship are eligible. Application is made through the University, and forms are available at the beginning of the winter quarter from the Dean of Students in the Divinity School.

9. Foreign students are encouraged to explore appropriate funding opportunities such as Fulbright-Hays, DAAD, SSHRC (Canada Council), Harkness, and World Council of Churches grants.

FELLOWSHIPS FOR FOREIGN STUDY

Graduate students at the University of Chicago have a number of opportunities for overseas study and research. Applications for overseas programs are usually due in early October of the year preceding the year of study abroad. Interested students should consult the Office of International Affairs, located in International House, 1414 East 59th Street, Chicago, Illinois 60637 (phone: 773-702-7752; fax 773-702-3058; e-mail: international-affairs@uchicago.edu; web site: http://internationalaffairs.uchicago.edu). A sampling of fellowships for foreign study is listed below:

1. The American Institute of Indian Studies (AIIS) Advanced Language Programs in India are open to graduate students (U.S. citizens or permanent residents) who will have completed a minimum of two years of instruction in Hindi, Bengali, or Tamil at the time of departure. For more information, contact the American Institute of Indian Studies, 1130 East 59th Street, Chicago, Illinois 60637 (phone: 773-702-8638; e-mail: aiis@uchicago.edu; web site: http://www.indiastudies.org/aiislang/AIIS.html).

2. Doolittle-Harrison Fellowships award up to $500 to University of Chicago doctoral students for conference attendance or for short-term travel within or outside of the United States to facilitate dissertation research. For more information, contact Brooke Noonan at the Office of Graduate Affairs, 5801 South Ellis Avenue, Room 221-A, Chicago, Illinois 60637 (phone: 773-702-0871; fax: 773-702-1194; e-mail: brookec@uchicago.edu).

4. German Academic Exchange Service (DAAD), an association of the institutions of higher education in the Federal Republic of Germany, offers a variety of awards to graduate students for study in Germany. The awards cover tuition, maintenance, and transportation to and from Germany. For more information, contact DAAD, 871 United Nations Plaza, New York, New York 10017 (phone: 212-758-3223; fax: 212-755-5780; e-mail: daadny@daad.org).

5. The University of Chicago is one of sixty institutions invited to participate in the Luce Scholars Program, established by the Henry Luce Foundation to send fifteen individuals for a year of work and travel in East Asia. Each award provides a substantial stipend (with an additional allowance for dependents), plus air transportation. Applications for nomination should be submitted to the University’s Center for East Asian Studies (CEAS) in late October. For more information, go to http://www.hluce.org/3scholfm.html or contact Dianne Yurco in CEAS at 773-702-8647.

6. Each year, the University awards numerous Overseas Dissertation Research Grants to advanced graduate students whose dissertations require a period of overseas research. For more information, contact the Office of International Affairs.

7. The Social Science Research Council (SSRC) offers fellowships and grant programs through annual competitions on a wide range of topics and across many different career stages. Most support goes to predissertation, dissertation, and postdoctoral fellowships. Some programs support summer institutes and advanced research grants. For more information, contact SSRC, 810 Seventh Avenue, New York, New York 10019 (phone: 212-377-2700; fax 212-377-2727; web site: http://www.ssrc.org/fellowships/).

8. The University offers exchange programs with the following Japanese universities: Rikkyo University, Tsukuba University, and Waseda University. Fluency in Japanese is required. Contact the Dean of Students in the Divinity School for more information.

Graduate Student Loans and Work-Study

To assist students in meeting the costs of their education, the University of Chicago participates in several major student loan programs. In addition, a limited number of loans is available from a variety of small, emergency loan funds. The terms of these programs are described briefly below.

Many students find that scholarship aid and their own resources (parental contributions, earnings from employment, savings, and gifts or loans from relatives and friends) are insufficient to meet the costs of their graduate or professional education. In such situations, students can turn to low-interest, long-term student loans. Borrowing from these sources, even at the favorable terms currently available, should be planned carefully in order to avoid the accumulation of unmanageable debt; nevertheless, students should not hesitate to take advantage of such loan programs, which are designed especially for them. Students who expect to be in the Divinity School for two or more years should budget their savings to last through the whole course of their education rather than exhausting them in the first year or two just to avoid borrowing.
Students who are considering loans to help finance their education should be aware that procedures and policies of the student loan programs are subject to review by the federal government. The programs are described below as they exist at the time of publication. Current information on student loan programs may be obtained from the Student Loan Administration, 970 East 58th Street, Room 411, Chicago, Illinois 60637 (phone: 773-702-6061; fax: 773-702-3238; e-mail: student-loans@uchicago.edu; web site: http://www.uchicago.edu/student/loans).

FEDERAL PERKINS LOANS

Students who demonstrate financial need according to accepted federal guidelines may borrow through the Federal Perkins Loan program. Perkins Loans carry a fixed 5% interest rate. Perkins Loans are extremely limited, however, and the University cannot guarantee the availability of Perkins moneys to all students who apply.

Perkins Loans, like Stafford Loans, are restricted to students who are U.S. citizens or permanent residents and are enrolled in the University at least half-time. A student may borrow a total of $40,000 in Perkins Loans (this includes NDSL loans) over the course of undergraduate and graduate work. The maximum loan amount for the 2006–2007 academic year is $3,600.

Students have a nine-month grace period after they graduate, leave school, or drop below half-time status before they begin repaying the loan. They have up to ten years in which to repay the loan, and the minimum monthly payment is $40.

FEDERAL STAFFORD LOANS

Full-time students who demonstrate financial need may also be able to borrow either subsidized or unsubsidized loans through the Stafford Loan program. Like Perkins Loans, Stafford Loans are restricted to students who are U.S. citizens or permanent residents and are enrolled at least half-time in the University. As of July 1, 2004, the current interest rate is 2.77%. The government pays the interest on the subsidized Stafford Loan while the borrower continues to be registered as a full- or half-time degree-seeking student for a six-month grace period following the last such registration. The unsubsidized Stafford Loan accrues interest as soon as it is disbursed; therefore, interest accrues while the student is still in school. A student may borrow up to $8,500 in subsidized student loans each academic year. For students who are either not eligible to receive subsidized Stafford Loans, or who have borrowed to the $8,500 limit, unsubsidized loans are available. These may be borrowed up to an annual total of $18,500, less any eligibility amount borrowed in the subsidized Stafford Loan. Both subsidized and unsubsidized loans must be repaid within ten years (or sooner, depending on the size of the loan), and the minimum monthly payment is $50. Students may borrow Stafford funds through the University of Chicago Loan Plan, described on the next page.

THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO LOAN PLAN

Developed in cooperation with the Illinois Student Assistance Commission (ISAC), the University of Chicago Loan Plan is one of the lender options available to students. Its Federal Stafford Loans offer students the benefit of no origination fee and no guarantee fee, which means no fees will be deducted from students’ loans. Its Alternative Loan has been tailored especially to meet the needs of University of Chicago students, setting itself apart with attractive features, such as a competitive interest rate.

The University of Chicago Loan Plan provides for electronic transfer of funds directly to students’ tuition accounts.

OTHER LOAN FUNDS
Registered students who run into unforeseen financial difficulties during the school year may apply for emergency short-term loans. Loans can be made for periods of sixty days with interest rates from 3 to 7%. A cosigner is required if the student will not repay the loan with stipend or student loan funds. International students also require a cosigner.

FEDERAL WORK-STUDY
The Federal Work-Study program provides an excellent opportunity for students to earn money from part-time work. It encourages students to apply early because these funds are extremely limited. Federal work-study eligible students are particularly attractive to campus departments that have job openings. Federal work-study is restricted to students who are U.S. citizens or permanent residents.

Please refer to the Student Loan Administration’s web site (http://www.uchicago.edu/student/loans) for more detailed information, including a copy of the Graduate Guide to Student Loans and/or Federal Work-Study and the online application.

EMPLOYMENT
As noted above, most Divinity School students work part time during some phase of their graduate studies. Divinity School students have full access to the many services of the University’s Office of Career Advising and Planning Services (see “Placement,” page 72), including job skills workshops, full- and part-time job listings, the College Work-Study program, and career counseling. Students can work as research assistants for professors, as editorial assistants on one of the four journals published in Swift Hall, on the Wednesday Lunch crew, or in the Divinity School’s student-run coffee shop. Many students work in various University offices, in the libraries, and in business establishments, colleges, and religious institutions throughout the Chicago area.

The University also has employment opportunities for spouses of students. For information about employment in the University, spouses may contact the University Department of Human Resources, 956 East 85th Street, Chicago, Illinois 60637 (phone: 773-702-8900; fax: 773-702-0353; e-mail: employment@uchicago.edu; web site: http://hr.uchicago.edu). Spouses of foreign students, however, may not work unless they hold J-2 visas and have received permission to work from U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services.

GENERAL INFORMATION

The Divinity School is located in Swift Hall, near the center of the main quadrangles of the University of Chicago campus. Visitors may reach the main quadrangles from downtown Chicago by Metra commuter train (from Randolph and Michigan to 59th Street, University of Chicago stop); by bus (CTA No. 6 Jackson Park Express, boarded along State Street in the Loop); and by car (via Lake Shore Drive). Persons arriving at O’Hare or Midway Airports may take the Omega Airport Shuttle (phone: 773-483-6634; web site: http://www.omegashuttle.com) to Ida Noyes Hall at the University, approximately three blocks from Swift Hall.

Swift Hall houses the administrative offices of the Divinity School, the offices of the faculty and staff, class and seminar rooms, Swift Lecture Hall, Swift Common Room, a student lounge, and a coffee shop. Upon occasion, University facilities outside of Swift Hall are used for classes and meetings.

The John Nuveen Wing of Swift Hall houses the Martin Marty Center, a research arm of the Divinity School dedicated to interdisciplinary inquiry in religion. It contains offices, seminar rooms, and a small reference library for the use of research fellows. (For more information on the Marty Center, see pages 69–70.)

RESEARCH RESOURCES

THE LIBRARY

The University of Chicago Library serves the primary research and study interests of faculty, students, and staff. One of the country’s foremost research libraries, it is a vital center in the intellectual culture of the University and a rich academic resource for the scholarly community.

The University Library is a unified system consisting of eight libraries that house resources in a variety of formats: approximately 6.8 million cataloged and classified volumes (as of June 2002); 41,000 active serial titles (and a total of approximately 139,000 active and inactive serial titles); 2.8 million microform units; 28,000 linear feet of manuscript and archival material; 260,000 rare book volumes; 416,000 maps and aerial photographs; 35,000 sound recordings; a large number of electronic indexes and abstracting services; and a wide variety of full-text electronic books and journals. For more information about the University of Chicago Library—its collections, services, and electronic resources—please visit http://www.lib.uchicago.edu, or call the Library’s Administrative Office at 773-702-8740.

The University Library’s extensive print and multimedia research collections in the humanities and social sciences are housed in the Joseph Regenstein Library, the Library’s largest facility. The Regenstein Library’s collections are especially rich in the fields of theology and religion, classics, philology, philosophy, psychology, languages and literatures, anthropology, art, film and theater, music, photography, political science, history, business and economics, linguistics, education, sociology and social statistics, maps and geography, and bibliography. Its holdings are supplemented by two smaller units, the School of

Social Service Administration Library and the William Rainey Harper Memorial Library for undergraduates and non-specialist readers throughout the University.

The Regenstein Library is home to four distinguished area studies collections. The Middle East Collection covers the ancient, medieval, and modern civilizations of the Middle East. Its holdings are particularly rich in Assyriology and Egyptology, and Islamic civilization from its rise in the sixth century until the present. The East Asian Collection is devoted to Chinese, Japanese, and Korean materials, primarily in the humanities and social sciences. Manchu, Mongolian, and Tibetan materials are also represented. The South and Southeast Asian Collections have publications on all aspects of life and culture in India, Bangladesh, Pakistan, Sri Lanka, Nepal, and Bhutan, as well as materials on Myanmar, Thailand, Cambodia, Laos, Vietnam, Malaysia, Singapore, Brunei, Indonesia, and the Philippines. The Slavic and East European Collections encompass the former Soviet Union and other East European countries.

The University’s collections of over 1.4 million volumes in the sciences, technology, biomedicine, and the history of science and medicine are housed in the John Crerar Library and in the Eckhart, Chemistry, and Yerkes Observatory libraries. The Crerar Library includes most of the University's science and biomedical collections. It has approximately 1.3 million bound volumes and 4,700 current serials. Over 4,000 science serial titles are available electronically. The Crerar Library’s collections in the history of science and medicine are distinguished and, combined with the rest of the University Library’s, are among the strongest in the country.

The 55,000-volume Eckhart Library holds the University’s collections in mathematics, mathematical statistics, and computer science; the 35,000-volume Chemistry Library holds the University’s collections in organic, inorganic, physical, analytical, and theoretical chemistry; and the 25,000-volume Yerkes Observatory Library (in Williams Bay, Wisconsin) holds the University’s collections in astronomy and astrophysics.

The D’Angelo Law Library holds a print collection numbering 670,000 volumes, complemented by sophisticated access to electronic information. Its comprehensive collections of federal and state law are supplemented by especially strong collections in foreign and international law.

The University Library’s collections of government documents include legislative and parliamentary proceedings and journals, census and statistical information, and legal materials from all over the world. The Library’s collections are particularly strong in nineteenth-century United States Federal documents and publications of major European governments dating back to the mid-nineteenth century.

With the exception of Special Collections and the Library’s Storage Collection, book stacks are open to readers who have a valid University ID or library card. Graduate-level research is promoted by long loan periods before materials have to be brought back to a library for return or renewal. Interlibrary loan service is available in all libraries.

Reference librarians are present to provide orientation to library collections, services, and facilities. The reference staff is available for individual and group consultation, and can be contacted in person as well as by e-mail and telephone. The Library’s subject bibliographers are also available for specialized reference services or to discuss print and/or electronic resources in their respective disciplines. Visit http://www.lib.uchicago.edu/e/using/reference for additional information.

The Library’s Web site provides both a wide variety of information about the Library’s collections and services and access to a growing array of networked information resources. The subject guides on the Web offer an overview of both print and electronic resources and provide a useful starting place for beginning research. A comprehensive list of electronic resources on the network with links to a variety of subject guides is available at http://www.lib.uchicago.edu/e/db.

To arrange a visit, please contact privileges@lib.uchicago.edu or call 773-702-8740.

INFORMATION TECHNOLOGY

The University provides a wide range of facilities and services to meet the information technology needs of students and faculty at the University.

Students have access to numerous electronic resources, such as full-text and bibliographic databases from workstations in the libraries and through the campus network. The Library has over 1,700 network connections throughout its facilities. Information about computer facilities in the libraries is available at http://www.lib.uchicago.edu/e/using/computing.

Networking Services and Information Technologies (NSIT) makes available to students general and advanced instructional and research applications, UNIX server systems, technical workstations, advanced research systems, the Multimedia and Learning Technologies Center, public computing labs, and assistance for users of these services, as well as electronic mail and Internet access. These allow national and international transmission of electronic mail and digital information, including images and links to specialized resources, such as supercomputers (the University is an Academic Affiliate of the National Center for Supercomputing Applications). The University also operates an advanced high-speed network for advanced research and instructional applications, including scientific visualization applications—Internet2, which interconnects most major research institutions. For more information about NSIT, visit http://nsit.uchicago.edu.

In addition to these central services, each division and most of the professional schools provide information technology services, including computer labs, related to specific disciplines. Consequently, there are over sixty computer labs located throughout the main campus.

The University has negotiated with major computer vendors to allow students to purchase workstations, microcomputers, and software at reduced prices. For more information on computer sales and services, call 773-702-6086, or e-mail ccs@sales.uchicago.edu.

THE MARTIN MARTY CENTER

The Martin Marty Center, established in the spring of 1998 to recognize Professor Marty’s manifold contributions to the understanding of religion, aims to promote research that is oriented toward public life and toward the role that religion plays—for good and for ill—in culture. The Marty Center oversees the development of major faculty research projects; sponsors research assistantships, a student research colloquium, and teaching assistantships; and fosters interactive connections to those public constituencies for whom specific research projects in religion will have significant consequences. Inquiries should be addressed to William Schweiker, Director, The Martin Marty Center, The University of Chicago Divinity School, 1025 East 58th Street, Chicago, Illinois 60637 (phone: 773-702-7049; fax: 773-702-8223; e-mail: w-schweiker@uchicago.edu; web site: http://marty-center.uchicago.edu).

HOUSING

LIVING ACCOMMODATIONS

The University of Chicago provides a variety of living options for its graduate students. For single students, the choices include International House (see below), Neighborhood Student Apartments, and the New Graduate Residence Hall. Neighborhood Student Apartments also offers apartment arrangements suitable for couples, students with a domestic partner (see definition of domestic partnership on page xx), and families.

The University owns and operates numerous apartment buildings located around and within the campus area. Graduate students who are single, married, or in a domestic partnership, and who are registered and making normal progress toward their degrees, are eligible to live in Neighborhood Student Apartments. Apartment sizes range from efficiency units to large three-bedroom apartments, furnished or unfurnished, in walk-up or elevator buildings. Parking lots are available at some buildings. Options for single students include single occupancy and shared apartments. Couples with children are given priority for the two- and three-bedroom apartments. Inquiries should be addressed to the Graduate Student Housing Assignment Office, 5316 South Dorchester Avenue, Chicago, Illinois 60615 (phone: 773-753-2218; fax 773-753-8054; web site: http://www.uchicago.edu/uchi/campus_services/nsa.html).

New Graduate Residence Hall is a University residence hall for students in the professional schools of Law and Business. Housing at New Graduate Residence Hall is available only for students in their first year of study at the University. Students who wish to remain in University housing after their first year should make arrangements with Neighborhood Student Apartments or with International House. Inquiries about New Graduate Residence Hall should be addressed to the Graduate Student Housing Assignment Office.

Additional information on housing options, including current costs, is sent to all newly admitted students.

INTERNATIONAL HOUSE

International House of Chicago was founded in 1932 through a gift from John D. Rockefeller, Jr. It is a coeducational residence for students from around the world. Each year, the House accommodates over five hundred graduate residents—about half from countries other than the United States—who are pursuing academic and professional degrees, preparing in the creative or performing arts, or training with international firms at Chicago institutions. International House promotes understanding and friendship among students of diverse national, cultural, and social backgrounds; provides facilities that can benefit the social and cultural development of its residents; and serves as a center of cultural exchange between international students and the greater Chicago community. The building is designed to facilitate informal daily interactions among residents—in the House’s dining room, Tiffin Room, courtyard, library, computer labs, and television lounges. These interactions make a major contribution to achieving the goals of the House. International House seeks residents who are willing to share their time and talent with the House community through its programs and activities. Scholarships and fellowships are available.

All inquiries should be addressed to the Resident Manager, International House, 1414 East 59th Street, Chicago, Illinois 60637 (phone: 773-753-2280; fax: 773-753-1227; e-mail: I-house-housing@listhost.uchicago.edu; web site: http://ihouse.uchicago.edu).

DISCIPLES DIVINITY HOUSE
Disciples Divinity House of the University of Chicago is a foundation for theological education directly affiliated with both the University and the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ). Its major purpose is to provide scholarships and related educational services to Disciples of Christ students attending the Divinity School. In addition, Disciples House maintains an ecumenical coeducational residence facility to which all Divinity School students are welcome to apply for housing. Located at the corner of the main quadrangles of the University, Disciples House has twenty-three furnished student rooms, a common room, library, chapel, and community kitchen. During the academic year, Disciples House sponsors a series of lectures and colloquia and subsidizes social activities organized by an elected student council. For further information and application forms, write to Disciples Divinity House of the University of Chicago, 1156 East 57th Street, Chicago, Illinois 60637 (phone: 773-643-4411; fax: 773-643-4413; e-mail: ddh.uchicago@attglobal.net; web site: http://ddh.uchicago.edu).

PRIVATE HOUSING
The private housing market in the neighborhood around the University is generally very tight. Students interested in housing outside the University system are advised to come to Chicago well in advance of the opening of the quarter in which they enter the University in order to secure accommodations. It is virtually impossible to obtain private housing by telephone or mail.

The University itself does not have an off-campus housing office, nor does it maintain listings of inspected and approved private housing. However, private real estate companies publish lists of housing available in the Hyde Park area. For more information regarding on- and off-campus student housing, see the magazine Chicago Life: A User’s Guide for Students at http://chicagolife.uchicago.edu/real/livingspace.shtml.
UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO STUDENT HEALTH CARE

HEALTH INSURANCE REQUIREMENT

The University requires all students, other than those in programs explicitly excluded (see “Ineligibility,” next page) to carry adequate medical insurance to cover, among other costs, hospitalization and outpatient diagnostic and surgical procedures. If the student resides in Chicago, the insurance must cover medical care other than emergency care in the Chicago area. The insurance requirement may be satisfied in one of two ways:

1. Enrolling in the Student Accident and Sickness Insurance (SASI) plan offered by the University, or
2. Completing the online insurance waiver application before the open enrollment deadline. The waiver application requires the student to certify that his or her insurance coverage is comparable to the Student Accident and Sickness Insurance plan.

MANDATORY QUARTERLY FEES

All registered students must pay the Student Health Fee, which covers services at the Student Care Center and the Student Counseling and Resource Center, as well as the Student Activities Fee, which covers student organization activities and programs coordinated by the Office of the Reynolds Club and Student Activities.

These fees will be waived only for those students who live and study over 100 miles from campus and who will not be on campus during the quarter. Students need to petition their area Dean of Students to receive this waiver.

There are no other grounds for waiver from these two mandatory fees.

AUTOMATIC ENROLLMENT

Students who fail to complete an insurance election or apply for a waiver by the open enrollment deadline for the plan year will be automatically enrolled in the University’s Student Accident and Sickness Insurance Basic Plan and billed for that enrollment. The enrollment is binding for the entire plan year, from September 16 until September 15 of the following year.

The open enrollment period ends at 5 p.m. on the third Friday of the autumn quarter. For students who are not registered for the autumn quarter but do register during the winter, spring, or summer quarter, the open enrollment period ends at 5 p.m. on the second Friday of the first quarter in which they are registered during the insurance plan year.

INELIGIBILITY

Students in the GSB evening and weekend, SSA evening, and the MLA programs are not eligible to enroll in the Student Accident and Sickness Insurance Plan. Doctoral students in Extended Residence are also not eligible to enroll in SASI. Students excluded from this requirement are not eligible to purchase the SASI plan.
STUDENT HEALTH AND WELLNESS FEE

All registered students, other than those in programs explicitly excluded, must pay the Student Health and Wellness Fee, which covers services at the Student Care Center and Student Counseling and Resource Services. The Student Health and Wellness Fee will be waived only for those students who live and study over 100 miles from campus and who will not be on campus during the quarter.

The Student Health and Wellness Fee will not be waived for participants of any other group or individual health plan.

Students in the following programs are not assessed the Student Health and Wellness Fee and are not entitled to services offered at the Student Care Center and Student Counseling and Resource Services: GSB evening and weekend, SSA evening, and the MLA programs. Doctoral students in Extended Residence are also excluded.

SUMMER HEALTH AND WELLNESS FEE

Students and June graduates who remain in the Chicago area during the summer but are not enrolled in classes have the option to purchase the Health and Wellness Fee for continued access to the Student Care Center and Student Counseling and Resource Services. Students’ family members already on the Student Accident and Sickness Insurance plan may also purchase this fee.

IMMUNIZATION REQUIREMENTS

By State of Illinois law, all new students (except those enrolled less than half time and non-degree international visiting scholars) are required to present proof of immunity from German measles, measles (two shots required), mumps, and tetanus/diphtheria (three shots required for international students). The Student Care Center (http://scc.uchicago.edu) notifies all new students of the requirement and provides instructions for compliance. Forms will be mailed to all incoming students and are available to be downloaded from the Web. They must be returned by mail or in person. They cannot be returned electronically.

After the third Friday of the first quarter of enrollment, students who are not yet compliant will have their subsequent registrations restricted and will not have the restriction lifted until they have become compliant with the immunization requirement. A student who receives this notification is urged to call the Immunization Office at 773-702-9975 to resolve his or her status.

Restricted students will lose online access to grades as well as access to University libraries, athletic facilities, and health services, among other privileges. Restricted students will be required to leave the University if the restriction is not cleared by the fifth week of the subsequent quarter. Students required to leave will not receive credit for work done through the end of the fifth week of the quarter.
CHILD CARE AND SCHOOLS

A wide variety of day care and baby-sitting options is available in the Hyde Park-South Kenwood area. Students with children, especially those who live in University housing, frequently form cooperative day care networks in their buildings. Many graduate student spouses provide baby-sitting in their homes and advertise their services on campus bulletin boards. There are many fine nursery schools in Hyde Park, including one run by the University. The University of Chicago helps employees and students find child care through two main sources:

1. Action for Children (formerly the Day Care Action Council) is a private, not-for-profit agency, which operates as a resource and referral service. The University has contracted with Action for Children to help you locate arrangements for your children. The organization is located at 4753 North Broadway, Suite 1200, Chicago, Illinois 60640 (phone: 773-687-4000; fax: 773-481-6610; Web site: http://www.daycareaction.org/).

2. The On-Campus Child Care Coordinator maintains a list of members of the University community who are interested in providing child care. The coordinator is located in the Benefits Counseling Office, Bookstore Building, Third floor, 970 East 58th Street, Chicago, Illinois 60637 (phone: 773-702-9634; fax: 773-834-0996; e-mail: benefits@uchicago.edu).

It is important to remember that the On-Campus Child Care Coordinator and the Day Care Action Council are referral services only and do not recommend or endorse any particular provider.

Hyde Park has excellent public, private, and parochial schools. Registration for public schools is based on neighborhood boundaries unless the school is a magnet school (open to children citywide), or unless a permit to attend is granted by the school. To ensure a place in a private or parochial school, enroll as early as possible (most schools are full by late summer).

For further information on childcare, nursery, elementary, and secondary schools, visit the information kiosk at the Office of Graduate Affairs’ Family Resource Center located at University Church (57th and University) or http://grad-affairs.uchicago.edu. The Family Resource Center also offers weekly parent/child activities, a parent lecture series, quarterly events, space for babysitting exchanges, support groups and nursing/changing stations. To join the parent listserv or register for the Family Resource Center, contact Natalie Tilghman, Assistant Director of the Office of Graduate Affairs, at nmhaney@uchicago.edu or 773-702-5094.

CAMPUS/NEIGHBORHOOD BUS SYSTEM

The Chicago Transit Authority (CTA), in cooperation with the University, operates three daytime bus routes that link the central campus with its periphery. During the evening, the University itself operates five bus routes: buses leave the central campus every thirty minutes, and traverse established routes. University students ride free by showing their University photo ID. An express bus route links the main campus with the University’s downtown Gleacher Center and near-north Chicago ($1.75 fare). For updated schedules, maps, and other information, visit http://www.rh.uchicago.edu/bus.
SECURITY

The University Police Department operates twenty-four hours a day, seven days a week, on campus and throughout the Hyde Park-South Kenwood neighborhood—the area bounded by 47th Street, 61st Street, Cottage Grove Avenue, and Lake Shore Drive. Officers are armed and fully empowered to make arrests in accordance with the requirements of the Illinois Law Enforcement Officers Training Board and consistent with Illinois state statutes. University Police and the City of Chicago Police Department work together by monitoring each other's calls within the University Police's coverage area. University Police headquarters is located at 5555 South Ellis Avenue, Chicago, Illinois 60637 (phone: 773-702-8181).

There are 242 white emergency phones in the area located on thoroughfares heavily trafficked by pedestrians. Simply press the red button inside the phone box and your location will be immediately transmitted to the University Police. You need not say anything. Response time is rapid; usually within two to three minutes (sometimes less) an officer or patrol car will come to your aid. If you must keep moving to protect yourself, continue to use emergency phones along the way so that the Police can follow your course.

The University has a multifaceted Safety Awareness Program, which is fully described in the publication Common Sense. Common Sense describes how to get around safely, whom to call if you need advice or help in emergencies, and how to prevent or avoid threatening situations. Information about crime statistics on campus and descriptions of security policies and awareness campaigns, including the University's drug and alcohol policy, are also included (see pages 72–76 for more information on University policies).

CHAPEL AND RELIGIOUS GROUPS

Ecumenical Christian services of worship are held Sunday mornings at 11:00 a.m. during the academic year and at 10:00 a.m. during the summer in Rockefeller Memorial Chapel, which is located at 5850 South Woodlawn Avenue, Chicago, Illinois 60637. Chapel Staff, Divinity School interns, and occasional guest preachers from across the nation address a congregation composed primarily of University students, faculty, staff, and Hyde Park residents. Special services are scheduled for the major seasons of the church year. The Chapel is open daily for private meditation and prayer. For more information, contact Rockefeller Chapel at 773-702-7059, or visit http://rockefeller.uchicago.edu.

The Chapel Choir, which sings at the Sunday services during the academic year, is open through audition. Organ concerts are given by the University Organist, and carillon concerts are offered every weekday when classes are in session by the University Carillonneur and qualified students and community members.

Four groups regularly hold worship in the Joseph Bond Chapel, located adjacent to Swift Hall. The Divinity School's own worship committee sponsors a short worship service each Wednesday morning at 11:30 a.m. during the academic year. These services, planned by students, utilize the talents of students, faculty, and staff. Brent House, the Episcopal campus ministry, offers a Eucharist service Thursdays at noon during the academic year; the Muslim Students Association holds its Friday noon prayers throughout the year; and Calvert House, the Roman Catholic campus ministry, offers a Eucharist service every Sunday at 11:00 a.m.

There are numerous religious groups in the University neighborhood that welcome student participation in their programs and worship. Following is a partial listing of religious groups and/or campus ministries at the University:

- Asian American Students for Christ
- The Baha’i Association
- The Bible Club
- Brent House Episcopal Campus Ministry
- Buddhist Association
- Calvert House Catholic Campus Ministry
- Campus Crusade for Christ
- Chabad Jewish Center
- Christian Science Organization
- Graduate Christian Fellowship
- Hillel (The Newberger Hillel Center for Jewish Life)
- Bhav Bhakti Hindu Society
- InterVarsity Christian Fellowship
- Korean American Campus Ministry
- Latter-Day Saints Student Association
- Lutheran Campus Ministry (Augustana Lutheran Church)
- Muslim Students Association
- Orthodox Christian Fellowship
- Quaker House
- Rockefeller Memorial Chapel
- Unitarian Universalist Campus Ministry
- United Protestant Campus Ministry
- University Church

For more information on any of these groups, go to http://rotq.uchicago.edu.

MINORITY AND ETHNIC STUDENT GROUPS

There are over a dozen minority and ethnic student organizations on campus, including the Organization of Black Students, the Minority Graduate Student Organization, the Organization of Latin American Students, the Middle Eastern Student Association, and PanAsia.

Each year, the Organization of Black Students sponsors its Kent Lecture; the Minority Graduate Student Association sponsors an annual conference, “Eyes on the Mosaic”; the Latin American and East Asian Studies Centers, the Committee on African Studies, and the Center for the Study of Race, Politics, and Culture offer both academic and social opportunities; and the International House offers a variety of culturally diverse activities. In addition, each quarter, there are colloquia and receptions designed especially for graduate minority students.

The Office of Minority Student Affairs (OMSA) works with student groups, faculty, and administrators to develop ways to enhance the academic and personal experiences of minority students who attend the University. For more information, contact OMSA, 5801 South Ellis Avenue, Chicago, Illinois 60637 (phone: 773-834-4672; e-mail: omsa@uchicago.edu; web site: http://omsa.uchicago.edu).
INTERNATIONAL STUDENTS

The Office of International Affairs (OIA) has the dual function of serving the University’s international students and scholars, and its American students who are interested in grants for overseas research. OIA advises international students about United States government regulations and University rules and policies. The staff helps with personal problems and concerns arising from study in a foreign country and also acts as a liaison with international groups and activities on and around campus. OIA conducts competitions for overseas study awards, such as Fulbright grants.

Inquiries may be addressed to the Office of International Affairs, located in International House, 1414 East 59th Street, Room 291, Chicago, Illinois 60637 (phone: 773-702-7752; fax 773-702-3058; e-mail: international-affairs@uchicago.edu; web site: http://internationalaffairs.uchicago.edu).

STUDENT ACTIVITIES

In addition to the rich cultural and recreational opportunities provided by the city of Chicago, there is much to do in the University itself. Most University students take part in one or more of the many musical, cultural, social, religious, and political organizations on campus. Due to the large number of graduate students at the University—about twice that of undergraduates—and because many faculty members live near campus and are able to attend cultural and social events, there is much that will appeal to graduate students.

Of special interest to international students is the yearlong program of events at International House (see page 64). Trips to concerts or the theater, language tables, the weekly Film Society program, the Consul General Dinner series, and the annual Festival of Nations offer opportunities for residents to interact with other people of different backgrounds and cultures in a friendly, informal manner that is achieved in few other places.

With more than 275 University-wide student organizations and the many organizations in the schools and divisions, there are countless ways for you to get involved in campus life. In 2006–2007, every graduate and professional student in the University pays a quarterly activities fee of $39. The funds collected support student activities, including large-scale entertainment events and programs with an all-University focus that are mounted by student organizations. Thirty-eight percent of the funds collected from graduate students are allocated to the graduate divisions and schools. These funds are distributed by the Deans of Students in each area to their graduate student councils, graduate student organizations, or to fund events for the students in that division or school. Each division and school distributes funds differently. Students should contact their area Dean of Students for more information. Funds are also allocated to the Graduate Council (GC), which is made up of the representatives from each graduate area. In addition to meeting to discuss issues that are important to graduate students, GC plans activities designed to encourage interaction between each academic area, including quarterly mixers and outings to museums and Chicago fun-spots, among other activities. GC’s web site (http://sg.uchicago.edu/assembly)—part of the Student Government’s web site—offers information on its activities, as well as useful links to campus services. The Office of the Reynolds Club and Student Activities (ORCSA) also maintains a Web site (http://studentactivites.uchicago.edu) that provides information on campus events, student organizations, starting a new student organization, and other services.

ATHLETICS

Graduate students at the University have a wide range of opportunities to participate in intramural activities, club sports, and instructional classes. All indoor and outdoor athletic facilities are open throughout the year to all students displaying a campus card. Spouses and domestic partners of students have access to facilities for a yearly fee. The athletic program provides men and women opportunities for instruction and participation in sports such as archery, badminton, gymnastics, handball, martial arts, racquetball, rowing, squash, sailing, swimming, table tennis, track and field, and weight lifting. The athletics department also offers opportunities to participate in approximately fifty intramural sports and forty sports clubs.

Opened in September 2003, the Gerald Ratner Athletics Center includes a 50- by 25-meter swimming pool, cardiovascular exercise equipment, weight machines, free weights, a multipurpose dance studio, a competition gymnasium, and an auxiliary gymnasium, among other features.

In addition to the Ratner Athletics Center, the Henry Crown Field House provides indoor athletic and recreational opportunities to the University community. Among the features of the Henry Crown Field House are four multipurpose courts, an indoor running track, and racquetball and squash courts.

PLACEMENT

The Divinity School provides placement counseling for academic and ministerial employment to all of its students. In addition, the University of Chicago’s Office of Career Advising and Planning Services (CAPS) provides information and assistance on jobs in academia, business, secondary and higher education, government, and non-profit organizations. This office maintains a resource library of career, internship, and employer information as well as guides to job-hunting skills. Experienced counselors are available by appointment to discuss with students immediate employment plans or long-range career interests. In addition, the CAPS office provides an online database of job openings, and sponsors a number of programs each year on both job-hunting strategies and opportunities in selected career fields. For more information, contact the Office of Career Advising and Planning Services, Ida Noyes Hall, 1212 East 59th Street, Chicago, Illinois 60637 (phone: 773-702-7040; web site: http://caps.uchicago.edu/).

Questions about placement may be directed to the Dean of Students in the Divinity School.

ALUMNI RELATIONS AND DEVELOPMENT

The Divinity School pursues a program of alumni relations and financial development through the offices of the Director of Development as well as through cooperation with the University’s Alumni Association and Office of Development. It also promotes contact with its friends and some 3,000 graduates through Criterion, the biannual magazine of the Divinity School, and Circa, a biannual newsletter from the Dean. For more information, contact Mary Jean Kraybill, Director of Development, The University of Chicago Divinity School, 1025 East 58th Street, Chicago, Illinois 60637 (phone: 773-702-8248; fax: 773-702-6048; e-mail: mjkraybill@uchicago.edu; web site: http://divinity.uchicago.edu/alumni/).

UNIVERSITY POLICIES

STATEMENT OF NON-DISCRIMINATION

In keeping with its long-standing traditions and policies, the University of Chicago, in admissions, employment, and access to programs, considers students on the basis of individual merit and without regard to race, color, religion, sex, sexual orientation, national or ethnic origin, age, disability, or other factors irrelevant to participation in the programs of the University. The Affirmative Action Officer (Administration Building, Room 501, 5801 South Ellis Avenue, Chicago, Illinois 60637; phone: 773-702-5671) is the University’s official responsible for coordinating its adherence to this policy and the related federal and state laws and regulations (including Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, as amended).

ASSISTANCE FOR DISABLED STUDENTS

The University does not have a comprehensive program oriented wholly toward educating students with disabilities, but strives to be supportive of the academic, personal, and work-related needs of each individual, and is committed to helping those with disabilities become full participants in the life of the University.

Students with disabilities should contact their area dean of students and a representative of the Office of the Vice President and Dean of Students in the University (Administration Building, Room 234, 5801 South Ellis Avenue, Chicago, Illinois 60637; phone: 773-834-9710) in as timely a fashion as possible to initiate the process for requesting accommodations at the University.

Once the appropriate documentation is received, professionals will review it to clarify the nature and extent of the disability. Ordinarily, a representative of the Office of the Vice President and Dean of Students in the University and area dean of students then will meet with the student to discuss the matter. If academic work is at issue, faculty may also become involved in these discussions. The student and the area dean of students will maintain contact as appropriate in ongoing efforts to accommodate the student. Assuming the documentation submitted is current and complete, this process may require up to ten weeks.

LEARNING DISABILITIES

The University is committed to working with learning disabled students who have been admitted to help them become full participants in academic programs. In all cases, the usual standards of judgment and assessment of students’ overall academic performance apply. Neither the community nor the students concerned are well served by applying special or lesser standards of admission or of evaluation. The representative of the Office of the Vice President and Dean of Students in the University may make accommodations to assist learning disabled students. Such accommodations need to be reasonable and appropriate to the circumstances, should confer equal opportunity on students with learning disabilities, and must not infringe on the essential requirements of or fundamentally alter the program.

As in the case of other disabilities, faculty and academic staff should instruct learning disabled students to request assistance from their area dean of students and a representative of the Office of the Vice President and Dean of Students in the University. Assuming the documentation submitted is current and complete, this process may require up to ten weeks.

DOMESTIC PARTNERSHIP

A domestic partnership is defined as two individuals of the same gender who live together in a long-term relationship of indefinite duration, with an exclusive mutual commitment in which the partners agree to be jointly responsible for each other's common welfare and share financial responsibilities. The partners may not be related by blood to a degree of closeness which would prohibit legal marriage in the state in which they legally reside and may not be married to any other person.

Benefits will be extended to a student's domestic partner and partner's child(ren) for the Student Accident and Sickness Insurance Plan, housing, athletic facilities, and libraries. Students who wish to enroll their domestic partner and/or his or her child(ren) for benefits should contact the Benefits Office (970 East 58th Street, Third floor, Chicago, Illinois 60637; phone: 773-702-9634) to request a Statement of Domestic Partnership form. Once approved by the Benefits Office, the Statement will certify that the student's partnership meets the University's requirements.

If a student wishes to enroll his or her domestic partner and/or partner's child(ren) for benefits at the time of certifying partnership, the student will also need to complete new benefit enrollment forms adding the partner and/or partner's child(ren) to the student's insurance plan. In order to obtain gym, library, and/or housing privileges, the student will need to present his or her approved Statement of Domestic Partnership at the appropriate office.

ACADEMIC HONESTY

As students and faculty of the University of Chicago, we belong to an academic community with high scholarly standards of which we are justly proud. Our community also holds certain fundamental ethical principles to which we are deeply committed. We believe it is contrary to justice, to academic integrity, and to the spirit of intellectual inquiry to submit the statements or ideas of work of others as one's own. To do so is plagiarism or cheating, offenses punishable under the University’s disciplinary system. Because these offenses undercut the distinctive moral and intellectual character of the University, we take them very seriously and punishments for them may include permanent expulsion from the University.

Proper acknowledgment of another’s ideas, whether by direct quotation or paraphrase, is expected. In particular, if any written source is consulted and material is used from that source, directly or indirectly, the source should be identified by author, title, and page number. Any doubts about what constitutes “use” should be addressed to the instructor.

ACADEMIC FRAUD

The University’s Policy on Academic Fraud can be accessed on the Web at http://www.uchicago.edu/uchi/policies.html. Charges against students are subject to these specific procedures only to the extent that they involve dissertations of students who have received their degrees, or work published or submitted for publication. Other cases of academic fraud by students shall be subject to the normal disciplinary rules governing students.

STUDENT REGULATIONS AND DISCIPLINE

Any conduct, on or off campus, of students as individuals and as members of campus groups that threatens the security of the University community, the rights of its individual members, or its basic norms of academic integrity is of concern to the University and may become a matter for action within the University’s system of student discipline.

The All-University Disciplinary System is set out in the Student Manual of University Policies and Regulations (see page 79). Every student should become familiar with the Manual, which is updated annually.

UNIVERSITY REPORTS

The University of Chicago annually makes information, including several reports and policies, available to its community and to prospective students and employees. These reports provide abundant information on topics from equity in athletics to campus safety, including several items for which federal law requires disclosure. Following are reports that are presently available from the University of Chicago. For those reports not available on the Internet, the University will provide copies upon request.

1. The University’s campus safety report, Common Sense, is published annually and includes the following:
   a) Information regarding transportation on and around campus.
   b) Safety tips and information on security and crime prevention programs.
   c) Campus policy regarding the sale, possession, and use of alcohol and illegal drugs.
   d) Information regarding drug and alcohol education programs.
   e) Crime statistics for the three most recent calendar years.
   f) Campus programs to prevent sex offenses and procedures to follow when sex offenses occur.
   g) Information regarding reporting of criminal activity.

3. The University’s policy concerning privacy and the release of student records is published annually in the University’s Student Manual of University Policies and Regulations. The policy explains the rights of students with respect to records maintained by the University, and outlines the University’s procedures to comply with the requirements of the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act. Copies of the Manual are available through the Dean of Students in each area, or online at http://www.uchicago.edu/docs/studentmanual.

4. Information on accommodations for persons with disabilities can be found in the Manual and in each division’s Announcements, including this one.

5. Information regarding current tuition and fees, including estimated miscellaneous costs, is available through the Dean of Students Office in the Divinity School.

6. For information on financial aid programs, contact the Dean of Students Office in the Divinity School.

7. Information regarding student graduation rates, tuition and loan refunds, and withdrawals can be obtained from the Offices of the Registrar and the Bursar, 5801 South Ellis Avenue, Chicago, Illinois 60637 (dial 773-702-7891 and 773-702-8000, respectively). This information is also available online at http://registrar.uchicago.edu, under the section “Time Schedules.”

8. Information on the University’s accreditation can be obtained from the Office of the Provost, 5801 South Ellis Avenue, Chicago, Illinois 60637 (phone: 773-702-8806).

9. Information on academic programs, faculties, and facilities can be obtained from the Dean of Students Office in the Divinity School.
